FIRA Blocks Data Firm

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal government has blocked plans of Data Communications to become the first inter-provincial company to set up headquarters in Victoria in more than a decade.

It was learned today the federal Foreign Investment Review Board has refused to give the company permission to operate in Victoria because it is American-owned and controlled.

The ruling has been appealed and the provincial ministry of economic development has urged Ottawa to let Data Communications operate in Canada because it would be a significant addition to the Victoria economy.

A verdict on the appeal is expected by month's end.

Caught in the middle is the Victoria Real Estate Board which is the first customer for the computer firm.

The company has leased premises at 2820 Nanaimo, two blocks from the Victoria Real Estate Board office, where it plans to print the catalogues if Ottawa has a change of heart.

First catalogues were to come off the press in Victoria on Friday but instead will be printed at the company's international headquarters in Santa Barbara.

"We can't print our catalogues in California indefinitely," a spokesman for the Victoria Real Estate Board said today.

"We hope Data Communications will be able to operate here but if not we will have to consider printing the catalogues ourselves, just as we have been doing."

Also caught in the controversy are eight members of the real estate board's publications staff who were laid off at the end of October to go to work for Data Communications.

Because of the federal ruling, Data Communications said it could not hire the eight people for fear of running afoul of Canadian laws. The eight will remain unemployed until the issue is resolved.

The federal government is understood to have asked McGraw-Hill that there be both Canadian financing and management in Data Communications if it is to operate in Canada. It also objects to storing of Canadian data in an American computer in California.

The company is prepared to consider all requests. All company employees in Canada would be Canadians, the firm said, and this includes all managerial personnel.

As for the computer, the company hoped to install one in Victoria within three years but for the time being wanted to use its central computer in Santa Barbara.

The provincial ministry of economic development has written to Ottawa saying the industry is important to British Columbia because it would attract business from other provinces.

Data Communications hopes to sign up most real estate boards in Western Canada and will print the catalogues in the Victoria plant.

The company would need a staff of about 50 people within three years, if growth targets were met.

Filmless Camera Coming

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A new electronic hand-held camera that might revolutionize photography because it does not require film or photo flash and has no moving parts is under development by the RCA Corp.

RCA says the camera, which is still in the design stage, is rugged, light-weight and so sensitive that it can take excellent quality photos — color or black-and-white — without a flash in any light, even on a dark, moonless night.

The retail price of the camera and equipment will be competitive with conventional photo gear, said a company engineer who promised picture quality will be excellent.

He said, however, that a working prototype has not been put together. Designs of various components still are being built and reduced to miniature circuitry.

You can view your pictures immediately on a television-like screen on the camera and erase the ones you do not want, the company said. Pictures you want to keep are retained on a computer-like memory chip in the camera.

Krall, product line director for closed-circuit video equipment for RCA, heads several teams of electronics scientists who are developing a new technology for still photography in a race with other companies in the United States and abroad.

Students Striking For 4-Day Week

COQUITLAM (CP) — About 500 students walked out of classes at Winslow junior secondary school Friday, saying they would not return until a four-day school week was implemented.

"The students were discussing the various days-of-work structures among labor unions and then they started talking about shorter weeks in the schools—but all the time it was just a theoretical discussion."

The communications class distributed opinion surveys to the other students and many of them took the idea seriously, he said.

One Grade 10 student, who said he was one of the strike's leaders, said he did not know how long the strike would last.

House, who has scheduled a meeting with the students, said the idea is impractical because society is not ready for it.

"Schools don't lead, they follow. There's just no way we could implement the four-day week."

Boy Held In Rush Bombing

A bomb blast during a rock show at Memorial Arena has ended in a bust for 16-year-old Saanich boy who is expected to appear in family court next week.

Police said an explosive device was set off in a water tank above a urinal in the south end mezzanine men's washroom, causing about $500 damage.

The boy was grabbed and held for police.

The explosion occurred Thursday night during a concert featuring Rush and attended by nearly 4,000.

It was the second bomb incident in Greater Victoria this week involving juveniles.

On Thursday a 16-year-old Central Saanich boy was charged with possession of explosive materials and theft after Saanich police raided a residence and discovered a pipe-bomb factory.

It is not known if the two incidents are related.

Ottawa Stall: B.C. Out $25M . . . For Opener

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said today desperation efforts by Ottawa to reduce its deficit will cost B.C. as much as $25 million next year in lost water services grants alone.

Wolfe has just returned from the first ministers conference in Ottawa where the federal government Friday announced it will delay for at least one year provincial grants totalling $250 million.

The grants are for joint federal-provincial programs for welfare and local services.

"This is really going to hurt British Columbia because we had signed agreements with the federal government and were ready to proceed," Wolfe said.

He said the grants have been delayed, not eliminated, and hopefully Ottawa will be able to make good on its commitment in 1980.

What angers the provincial finance ministers, he said, is the lack of advance warning about the cutback and then the minimal consultation that followed.

He said Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau told Ottawa the provinces were being offered a choice of which way they wanted to be eaten — boiled or fried.

Wolfe said: "That pretty well sums up the situation."

He said the provinces are being forced to bail out the federal government, which has genuine and severe financial problems, but problems of its own making.

"Ottawa did not heed our warnings about over-spending and now they are being forced to take remedial actions."

Many of these remedial actions are at the expense of the provinces, he said.

Wolfe said B.C. warned Ottawa that its 1977-78 estimates showed a 12 per cent increase in spending at a time when provincial governments were exercising restraint.

"They didn't listen to our warning and now we are all paying."

Wolfe said the delays will cost B.C. between $15 million and $25 million in community services grants plus a lesser amount for welfare programs.

He said the B.C. government will do what it can to help Ottawa with its prob-

Winter's First Storm Kills Two, Hurts Many

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The first major storm of the winter struck southern Vancouver Island with a vengeance Friday dumping up to 38 mm. of rain and some snow.

The storm contributed to numerous traffic accidents, including a four-car pileup on the Malahat that took the life of a 19-year-old New Westminster youth.

The weather was also believed partly to blame for another traffic fatality in the Duncan area early this morning when a 19-year-old Saskatchewan man was killed after his car skidded into a power pole at Maple Bay and Drummond Roads. An unidentified female passenger was not hurt. No names have been released.

Colwood RCMP identified the victim of the Malahat crash as Ronald Andrew Campbell.

A spokesman said Campbell was a passenger in a car that went out of control on a curve on Tunnel Hill about half a mile north of the Goldstream Park picnic area.

The car, driven by Daniel Jacques, 19, of 1010 Empress, sideswiped one oncoming car and slid broadside into another, police said.

The accident occurred shortly after 3:30 p.m. in pelting rain and fog.

Campbell was killed instantly but Jacques escaped with minor injuries.

Two other persons were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries. Their names have not been released.

The mishap was one of six accidents attended by Colwood police overnight as heavy rain mixed with snow on the higher elevations created nightmarish driving conditions.

Sidney reported three traffic accidents involving six vehicles and both Saanich and Victoria catalogued more than a dozen, half of which involved injuries.

Most of the injuries were fairly minor except one involving a 45-year-old pedestrian who was sent to Royal Jubilee with a concussion and multiple cuts after being hit by a car in the 1900-block McKenzie at 6 p.m.

Saanich police said Michael Parris of 1869 Elmhurst was walking across the road shielding himself from the downpour and didn't see the car approaching driven by

All Plugs Pulled For Clean-Up

Times News Services

Premier Bill Bennett said Friday the provincial government will spare no expense in cleaning up the mess left in the wake of severe flooding in several northwestern British Columbia communities.

"The first priority at this time is to do the clean-up, restore the transportation and all the utilites, make sure there is no further loss of property and to try and get on with the rebuilding," Bennett said.

The government does not yet have an estimate of the costs involved.

"It's extensive," Bennett said. "We're talking in figures of millions of dollars which we will have to spend to restore the utilities and transportation services, and to deal in fighting the problem.

"Nothing has been delayed or held back."

Highways Minister Alex Fraser Fraser, who was earlier stranded in the area because of the flooding, will be responsible for the clean-up program.

The premier told a news conference the government would help persons living in the Terrace-Kitimat area, where the flooding is concentrated, saying it would "be responsive to the needs of communities and individuals."

He said the government has opened a headquarters in Terrace to co-ordinate its program. MLA Cyril Shelford (SC-Skeena) will work out of the office, which will co-ordinate provincial and federal

The Memoirs of Margaret T. Worth $500,000 So Far

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Margaret Trudeau's book about her life as wife of the Canadian prime minister appears destined for the international best-seller lists.

Serialization rights to the book, A Personal Memoir, have already been sold to European publishers and competition among North American companies for the right to publish excerpts is reported to be "vigorous."

At an auction two weeks ago in West Germany, the London Daily Express paid a reported $80,000 for British serialization rights to the as-yet-uncompleted book. Sources said that the German publication, Der Stern, paid about $100,000 for similar publication rights for western Europe.

In New York, a representative of the New York Times syndicate confirmed Friday that his organization has submitted a bid for U.S. serialization rights, but he refused to disclose any figures.

Other U.S. and Canadian sources said, however, that serialization rights and other pre-publication sales could earn Mrs. Trudeau as much as $500,000.

Spokesmen for Paddington Press, the New York city company that is publishing the book and handling arrangements for secondary publication rights, refused to comment on either the content or the remuneration that Mrs. Trudeau stands to receive.

The spokesman for the New York Times Company said, however, that the book was "in excellent taste and speaks highly of the prime minister."

The Times representative said his company would not have been interested in the book "if it was not in good taste or could have in any way affected the outcome of the (next Canadian) election."

Rumors that Mrs. Trudeau's book would include sections that could prove politically embarrassing to her husband were dismissed by all who have read excerpts of the uncompleted manuscript.

"It is exceedingly well written," said one publisher's representative who asked not to be identified, "and it speaks most highly of Mr. Trudeau."

Random House publishers, of Toronto, has purchased the Canadian hardback publishing rights for the book, but syndication rights for Canada have not yet been sold.

New York sources said discussions are now under way with several Canadian publishers and that Canadian serialization rights probably will be sold within the next two to three weeks.

One New York publisher said, he thought the book would have strong appeal to "young people."

Students' English Getting Worse

The standard of English used by students trying to enter university in B.C. continues to decline despite efforts in the school system to improve the command of the language.

Results of the English placement test written in April by 19,000 Grade 12 students and others hoping to get into post secondary institutions are down in all three categories from last year's results, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Friday.

Students scored an average of 11.66 out of 20 on remedial sentences compared to 12.32 last year; 15 out of 20 on English-as-a-second-language sentences compared to 15.44 last year; and 40.2 out of 80 on composition compared to 42.29 last year.

McGeer, however, said he is not disappointed despite the fact "the results do not indicate the improved performance I had hoped for."

A number of factors may have contributed to the lower averages such as a tougher test this year, harder marking or "more people of lesser ability may have decided to accept the challenge of the examination," he said.

Meanwhile, the ministry continues to seek ways to improve English usage.

A prescribed textbook for grammar in grades 11 and 12 was introduced this year for the first time along with the core curriculum.

And ministry officials are working with districts which have shown particular difficulties, McGeer said.

But he also called on concerted efforts by teachers to upgrade student writing.

"Students who wrote the test this year are products of the same system as those who wrote last year," McGeer said. "We should not expect overnight improvement."

Storm

Michael Martin, 25, of HMC Dockyard.

Parris is in fairly good condition.

Friday's precipitation at Victoria Airport — 34 mm. — and at Gonzales — 38 mm. — was well below the record for the month of November — 68 mm. — set on Nov. 2, 1955.

But it was still enough to cause widespread flooding throughout the area. Oak Bay police reported seven basements and one street were flooded when storm drains backed up. In Saanich there were about 16 basements flooded.

In the city, works crews had to be called out to clear gutters clogged with autumn leaves. The worst flooding problems were at Cook and Haultain, Pembroke and Shelbourne and Cook and Burdett.

On Pat Bay Highway motorists had to contend with about 2½ feet of water that had collected in a dip in the road at Mount Newton Cross Road.

Lawyers Pass Limited Ads

The Law Society of British Columbia has voted to allow a limited amount of advertising by the province's lawyers.

The 3,700 lawyers voted in a province-wide referendum in early October against allowing the fees they charge to be included in advertising or promotional pamphlets but approved limited advertising.

The society is not bound to carry out the results of the referendum, an announcement said.

The president of the Victoria Bar Association today welcomed the outcome of the vote.

David Wilson said he supports lawyers being able to announce the field of law in which they wish to specialize.

"I think that's good from the public's point of view," he said.

Although the society is not bound to carry out the results of the referendum, the executive is expected to draft an amendment which will be returned to the membership within the next few months for ratification.

Wilson said allowing lawyers greater latitude in advertising may create some problems.

Just because a lawyer decides to confine his activities to a certain field of law should not be construed the lawyer is an expert in that field, Wilson said. Yet that may be the impression the public will get.

He noted, that unlike, say, the medical profession, there is no means of certifying a lawyer as expert in any field per se.

"That's the real conundrum. I don't know how we're going to solve that."

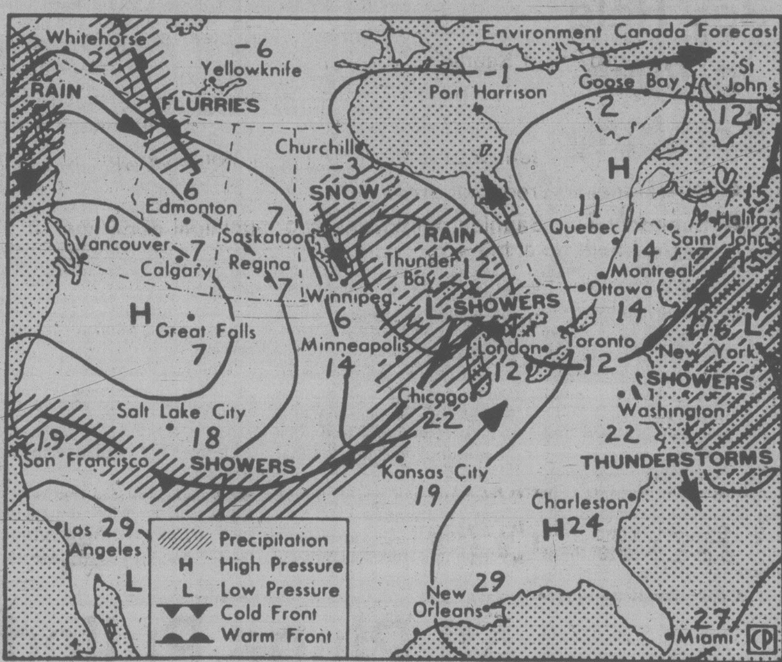

Map valid until midday Sunday

A weak depression lying offshore Friday night developed explosively as it approached the south coast. Winds of more than 250 kilometers an hour aloft have pushed this depression into Alberta. However, it had enough time to leave some damage behind.

Many areas reported heavy rains and with the freezing level dropping, many areas of southern B.C. reported heavy snow. This disturbance also triggered thunderstorms which gave gusts of 80.

Following this disturbance is a ridge of drier, colder air forcing its way across the south coast with the result that westerlies of near 90 are being reported in Juan de Fuca Strait. Clearing will gradually take place as this drier air spreads over the province today.

Further upstream is another series of disturbances which will affect the north coast tonight and eventually the remainder of B.C. late Sunday.

KAHL TO WALK E&N

Lyle Kahl, Social Cradit MLA for Esquimlt, plans to walk the 226-kilometre length of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway from Courtenay to Victoria.

Purpose of the walk, he said, is to draw attention to the need for saving the passenger service.

Kahl said he expects to take the train to Courtenay on Thursday and hopes to walk between 20 and 30 miles a day.

A Canadian Transport Commission hearing will be held in Victoria on Nov. 15 to hear appeals against closure of the service.

$8 Million Man Hunted

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A $10-million theft from a major bank has touched off a widespread hunt for a suspect who authorities said still may have $8 million.

Security Pacific Bank here, the 10th largest bank in the United States, and the FBI told of the crime Friday at a news conference here.

Bank Vice-Chairman George Moody said the bank was the "victim of a very complex scheme" on Oct. 25 involving the fraudulant transfer of $10.2 million in its funds to an account in a New York City bank.

Moody said the crime, discovered this week, was carried out by an individual who stole information about the bank's wire-transfer procedures.

About $2 million of the stolen funds has been located through normal bank channels.

FBI officials identified the suspect as Stanley Mark Rifkin of the San Fernando valley section of Los Angeles. They described him merely as a 32-year-old bachelor.

Mr Moody said he was not a bank employee, and there was no indication any bank employee was involved in the theft.

FBI agent Douglas Ball said the theft was a "fast moving case."

It is "certainly possible that he (Rifkin) had fled the country with the money," Ball said.

Moody said a substantial portion of the loss was believed to be covered by insurance and that the financial impact of the theft will be insignificant.

Training Trousers Keeping Spacemen Balanced

MOSCOW (AP) — The two Soviet cosmonauts who spent a record-breaking 140 days in space were readjusting to life on earth Friday by practising how to walk upright, Tass reported.

Cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalenok, commander of the Soyuz craft, and flight engineer Alexander Ivanchenkov tested their strength by bending, squatting and walking under medical supervision at the space centre in Baikonur, Tass said, adding:

"To get accustomed more quickly to upright positions, they were told to wear special training trousers which make it easier for the leg vessels to adapt themselves gradually to terrestrial blood filling."

On the plane that took them from their landing site to Baikonur, the cosmonauts were seated at a tabled laden with tomatoes, bread and grapes.

"Before partaking of the 'earthly food' the flight engineer sniffed it with obvious pleasure," Tass said, but Kovalenok could only drink a cup of hot tea.

It quoted a doctor as saying: "This is enough for the present. After a long stay in conditions of weightlessness, a glass of tea is to a space traveller like a capital dinner."

Iran Massacre

TEHRAN (AP) — Troops fired automatic weapons and tear-gas grenades into demonstrating students at Tehran University today and anti-government violence flared elsewhere in the Iranian capital. Student groups claimed at least 40 persons were killed, but the government said there were no deaths.

A taxi driver who witnessed the university shooting said he counted 20 victims lying in the streets and all appeared dead. Other unconfirmed reports put the number of dead at only 10, with 30 wounded.

Information Minister Mohammed Reza Ameli-Tehrani said the reports of deaths are "not true," but he confirmed many persons were injured in the campus clash. Witnesses reported the injured included both youths and members of the security forces.

Government sources said the bloodshed occurred as the students prepared to march to the home of Moslem holy leader Ayatullah Taleghani despite the opposition of heavily-armed troops. When the students did not obey orders to disperse, the soldiers opened fire, the sources said.

The violence spread to Tehran's main avenue, in front of the Intercontinental Hotel, 2½ kilometres from the university. Youths shattered ground-floor windows of the hotel as guests scattered to safety.

SA Sanction Threat Stalled by West

Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — In an effort to prevent a serious clash with black African nations over applying sanctions against South Africa, Western diplomats led by the United States Friday secretly proposed a compromise that would postpone for two weeks Security Council action on the sanctions question.

Reliable sources said the Western proposal, which was presented to African representatives Friday, would suspend Council debate on the sanctions issue for two weeks while Secretary General Kurt Waldheim sounds out the South African government on its willingness to comply with a U.N. plan for the independence of Namibia. The Africans reportedly said they would study the idea but made no immediate commitments.

The sources said the plan was devised after Western diplomats decided that they and the Africans are unable to find a mutually-acceptable formula for a Security Council resolution dealing with South Africa's alleged defiance of the UN plan for pre-independence elections in Namibia.

In the absence of an agreement, the sources added, the Council debate, which is scheduled to resume Monday, almost certainly would result in adoption of an African-backed sanctions resolution.

That, in turn, would force the West to veto the resolution — a move that would severely strain the relations of the United States and its principal allies with black Africa and deal a major blow to Western hopes for promoting peaceful solutions to racial conflicts in southern Africa.

Some sources characterized the Western proposal as a last-ditch attempt to stave off an imminent confrontation and buy time to try to induce South Africa to make some gesture that will satisfy the black African states. However, these sources added, even if the Africans agree, Western diplomats are pessimistic that the necessary progress can be made in the interim and fear that the sanctions dispute will erupt again after the two weeks are over.

The controversy arose after South Africa backed out of a plan — sponsored by the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada — for the United Nations to oversee Namibia's move to independence. South Africa has ruled Namibia (formerly Southwest Africa), a sparsely populated territory on its northwestern border, since 1920 under a old League of Nations mandate.

Worldwide Attack On Bermuda Triangle Mystery

MOSCOW (Reuter) — A Soviet scientist says a worldwide experiment next month may solve the mystery of the Bermuda Triangle area of the Atlantic where 100 ships and 20 planes have disappeared since 1945.

Oceanologist Luch Mikhailovich Fomin said Friday that that at the end of December 10,000 weather stations throughout the world, 50 research ships, meteorological satellites and research aircraft will take synchronized readings in the area.

KREMLIN, VIETNAM ACCCORD

MOWCOW (WP) — The Soviet Union and Vietnam Friday night signed a treaty of friendship and co-operation, binding the two nations more closely together against their bitter adversary, China, and raising Soviet influence in Asia.

At a dinner honoring the Vietnamese, Brezhnev said the treaty "holds special significance at this complicaed moment when the policy of the Chinese leadership has created new, major difficulties for Socialist construction on Vietnamese soil."

He added, "It is predictable that it will be resented by those who do not like friendship between the USSR and Vietnam, who place reliance on aggravation of tension, on dividing Socialist countries."

But, sounding a defiant note, he remarked, "the treaty already has become a political reality. And whether they want it or not, they will have to reckon with this reality."

Wild Rivers

Ten years ago the B.C. Wildlife Federation proposed legislation to preserve some of the province's wild rivers in their natural state. The idea met with near-unanimous endorsement from politicians of all parties, outdoors groups and interested individuals.

But somehow, nothing ever was done. It is a proposal that deserves to be revived.

In its original prospectus, the federation cited three rivers as examples of possible classification — the Gitnadoix near Terrace, as a wild river; the Chilko-Chilcotin system as a scenic river and the Cowichan as a recreation river.

The first-named stream is about 30 miles west of Terrace in a deeply-cut glacial valley, flanked by 6,000-foot peaks for all of its 20 miles. The Gitnadoix is (or was in 1968) in a pristine state, thus the wild river designation.

The Chilko and Chilcotin rivers are in the midst of cattle ranching country. Roads run parallel to and cross the rivers at several places. There is access by vehicle to most points on the Chilcotin. "Scenic" designation is proposed, a classification for rivers free of dams and diversions, largely in their natural state but where some development has taken place.

Third classification is the recreation river, readily accessible by road or rail, where there has been considerable human intrusion, with some diversion or impoundment and bank-side development. The Cowichan is a good example.

Classification would halt any further alienation of the river. Some of the province's rivers probably never will require statutory protection. But others — like the Cowichan, and other Vancouver Island streams, and some of the Fraser's tributaries close to Vancouver — are threatened.

The Questionable Commando

At the risk of fanning the fires of paranoia, the current Maclean's magazine cover story on the Canadian Armed Forces and its elite Special Services Force raises a number of disturbing points about the directions being taken by the Canadian military.

There is no doubt, as the article points out, that recent rebuilding in the armed forces and creation of the crack 3,500-man SSF unit at Petawawa in Ontario have rejuvenated and boosted morale in Canada's beleaguered defence establishment. And there is no doubt that the country needs and deserves an adequate and well-trained fighting force. But questions surrounding the intended purpose of this rebuilding, and of the SSF in particular, demand some straightforward answers.

The SSF was created two years ago when the Canadian Airborne Regiment was transferred from Edmonton to Petawawa and merged with elements of other commando-style units. The fact that it was born within weeks of the Parti Quebecois election is certainly coincidence. And the fact that it was stationed just across the border from Quebec can be rationalized, even though Petawawa has no airfield and parachutes must be shipped to Edmonton for repacking.

But other curious questions are not so easily answered. Does this elite fighting unit really need to be equipped with handcuffs and gas masks? Why did it select armored vehicles used by other forces primarily for riot control? And most of all, why has it been secretly training at Petawawa with Britain's mysterious and infamous Special Air Service?

The SAS, noted most recently for its harsh but effective actions against Northern Ireland's terrorists, is the most secretive and, some say, brutal of Britain's military units. Photographing its members is strictly forbidden, except in some cases where the soldiers are wearing hoods. Maclean's quotes an ex-member as saying all SAS ranks have a "licence to kill." Their specialty is counter-insurgency.

The uniforms, emblems and mottos of the SAS and Canada's SSF are almost identical and it has now been confirmed that an SAS unit trained secretly last summer with members of Canada's elite at Petawawa and possibly elsewhere across the country. The question is; how deep does the similarity run?

The long-awaited announcement this week that the SSF does have a specific military function — the NATO defence of Norway — does not answer the question. Except in the unlikely event that Norway comes under attack, the SSF will remain, poised and ready to move wherever the federal government orders it, either outside Canada or within our borders.

Coincidence is always an easy explanation, but it does nothing to dampen fears once those fears are born. If the role of the SSF is as legitimate and straightforward as Danson maintains, that fact must be explained much more convincingly. And if we are training a military commando force for counter-insurgency or action in the event of civil war, we must be told that, too. And the reason why.

Higgitt Serves a Purpose

OTTAWA — The quality of testimony before the McDonald commission by a former RCMP commissioner, W.L. Higgitt, has been widely criticized, but its unsatisfactory nature may in itself be to the service of the public.

It can hardly fail to shake the conviction, until now held in some of the highest government circles, that the best way to safeguard against abuses by the RCMP and its security service is to "leave it to the commissioner." After Higgitt's testimony no one but a fool could ever put that proposition forward again. Nor could the prime minister put forward again the doctrine of ignorance he espoused last December when he argued publicly that even the minister ostensibly responsible for the RCMP "should not have the right to know what the police are doing constantly in their investigative practices, in what they are looking at and in the way in which they are doing it."

When Trudeau first put his doctrine forward he was widely criticized for it. If he were to do it again now, he would be widely ridiculed.

Ministers Failed

It has long been clear that the essence of the problem that has arisen with the RCMP is not a certain number of misdeeds that were committed, nor some practices of doubtful legality or even demonstrable illegality. It is the breakdown in government responsibility and supervision that underlay these developments. Far from it being an excuse when former solicitors-general profess their ignorance, this plea merely underlines the grave degree to which they failed in their ministerial responsibilities.

The extent to which some of these ministers were informed by the RCMP is in conflict between themselves and the former commissioner, but that is not the critical aspect of their failure. There were, in fact, three trigger points which would have warned an alert minister or prime minister of situations that demanded their attention and supervision.

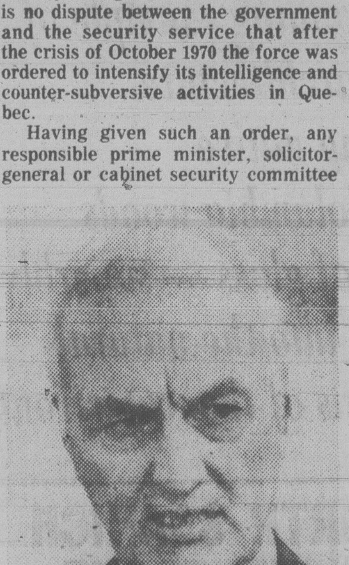
The first of these was this statement on page 21 of the abridged edition of the Report of the Royal Commission on Security, presented to the government in 1968 and acted upon to a very limited extent by Trudeau the following year:

"A security service will inevitably be involved in actions that may contravene the spirit if not the letter of the law and with clandestine and other activities which may sometimes seem to infringe on individuals' rights; these are not appropriate police functions."

The government to this day seems not to understand that by taking no clarifying or additional supervisory steps it acquiesced in "actions that contravene the spirit if not the letter of the law" and that it thereby approved them. Higgitt's testimony was bumbling on questions of when ministers were, as he claimed, informed of illegal practices but there is justice in his claim that they must have known what sort of thing was going on. It is a simple matter of record that the royal commission had formally alerted them to it.

The second trigger point was an action by the government itself. There is no dispute between the government and the security service that after the crisis of October 1970 the force was ordered to intensify its intelligence and counter-subversive activities in Quebec.

Having given such an order, any responsible prime minister, solicitor-general or cabinet security committee would have recognized a need to be informed on how the fresh instruction was being carried out unless there was an active desire not to know, an application of the principle not unknown in connection with security work of "do what you must but don't tell me." The prime minister's subsequent enunciation of the doctrine of ignorance, the insistence that the minister had no right to know "that way in which they are doing it," is merely a more formal statement of that long-standing practice.



HIGGITT
. . . bumbles testimony

Thus the second trigger point which should have inspired ministerial responsibility was either ignored or its implications deliberately evaded.

The third trigger point was again an action by government itself, the formation by cabinet of the first formal, written mandate the security service ever received. Issued to the service by cabinet on March 27, 1975, it added to the intelligence gathering role an instruction to take executive action against subversive groups. The words were these:

"To discourage, prevent and thwart the activities of certain individuals or certain groups in Canada."

This formal mandate was prepared after the events which have preoccupied the McDonald commission but it was simply a codification and a formal instruction. It is not reasonable to suppose that it represented a radical departure from cabinet thinking that must have prevailed at least as early as the post-October 1970 instructions to the police to intensify its efforts in Quebec. During the year or two after the Cross and Laporte kidnappings official thinking on the problems of terrorism and subversion was dominated by those events. By 1975, they had faded into the background and no new problem or emergency had arisen which would have caused a group of cabinet ministers to add a radical fresh instruction to those already given the force.

Actions Acceptable

As late as 1975, in any case, and presumably subsequent to that, actions by the security service to "discourage, prevent and thwart" the activities of individuals and groups were acceptable to Trudeau and his ministers, although apparently cloaked by the prime minister's view that the responsible minister had no right to know "the way in which they are doing it."

But instructions to prevent and thwart the activities of individuals and groups are extreme and they inevitably must lead a security service to go beyond intelligence gathering into specific act[illegible]. To be fair, while James Bond would cheerfully have burned down a fictional barn, the cabinet can scarcely have foreseen that a group of over-enthusiastic RCMP officers would put the torch to a real one. But they did know and intend that their instructions would lead to action and it is unreasonable to suppose that this intention commenced with the formal mandate of 1975 rather than the less formal fresh instructions of 1970.

Some of the RCMP actions were ill-advised and even stupid but none went beyond a mandate to "discourage, prevent and thwart the activities of certain individuals or certain groups in Canada."

An Insurance Plan

Re your article Most U.I.C. Recipients Likely Don't Need It (Times, Oct. 27):

Before all your unthinking readers start frothing at the mouth, let us consider the situation.

Unemployment insurance is just that — insurance — that employee and employer contribute to. It is explicit in UIC literature that upon termination of a job, the employee shall immediately report to his local Manpower office and register for work and shall also present his separation form at that time. Benefit payments are a bridge to assist the unemployed financially between jobs. It is not a form of welfare; the recipient must not declare that he has no means of support.

Tacit, rather, is the idea that the worker may retain at least some of his savings while seeking employment, thus, the headline is generally true. Most UIC recipients could survive on their own savings for a limited period of time. But, assuming that in our country (where unemployment is at least 8,5 per cent and more honestly rather higher) work cannot be found, then the out-of-work and financially disabled have no alternative but to seek welfare.

May I suggest that under the circumstances we should applaud our unemployment insurance program for the assistance it provides for those in between work, rather than assume the attitude that 90 per cent of unemployed persons are taking advantge of insurance they "don't really need?" — John Porter, Box 329, Saanichton.

Animals Need Help

We went to the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter to visit Mother Cecilia and Sister Julia as we were very concerned of their need for help through the article written by Max Low (Good Shepherds Struggling — Their Need Is Cold Cash; Times, Oct. 28).

I find it difficult to put into words our feelings when Sister Julia took us to meet Mother Cecilia, the most beautiful person we have ever had the privilege of meeting. This wonderful lady is quite ill and no doubt worried at the continually rising debt the shelter finds itself in, due to nothing more or less than a tremendous love and care for the finest friends man has or ever will have — our four-footed friends.

I ask on behalf of Mother Cecilia and Sister Julia, will you help and send a donation to them as quickly as possible? They desperately need your help so they can in turn keep the animals happy and healthy.

It costs $1,000 per week to feed the animals and $3,000 per month for wages. Sister Julia (the bookkeeper) is concerned regarding both, not to mention the debt they are in already.

Sister Julia says receipts will be sent to all people kind enough to help and your donations are tax-deductible. The address is:

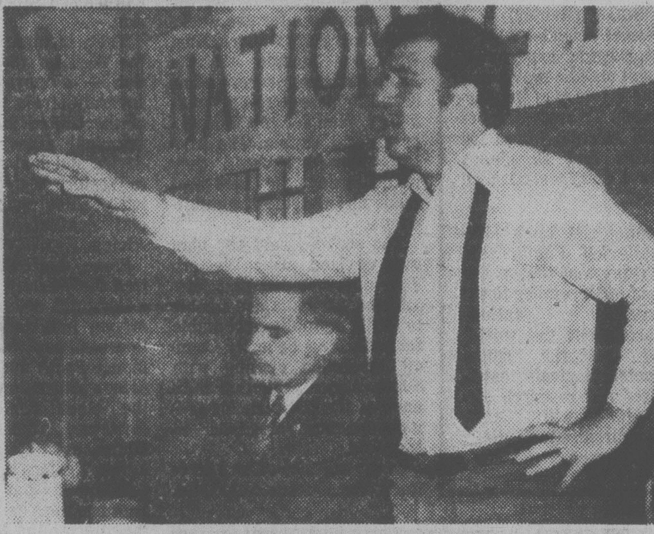
Prudery, Please

In a recent edition of Monday, I noticed they accused you of prudery for some deft art work on some advertising for a movie that you had done.

I would just like to say that if those clowns ever manage to lift their heads up and acknowledge some moral refinement they will probably be grateful, as I am, that there are still some people that aren't willing to part with their good taste, in order to sell their labors to a few perverts.

It was very pleasing to see the changes you had made. I hope that this might encourage you to keep up the good work and even go on to greater improvements. — R. Cummins, 1046 Amphion Street.



Dave Barrett: reader says he skips the truth.

A Half-truth

I have just finished watching Jack Webster's program featuring Dave Barrett. As usual, Mr. Barrett was a masterful and convincing debater. But, also as usual, did not tell the whole truth, only part of the truth that made him and his party look good.

At one point he stated that during the three years since he was in office, the costs of the premier's office had more than doubled. What he failed to mention was that during his term of office, a department known as the "planning advisor to the cabinet", headed by Marc Eliesen and costing $179,805 in the year 1975, was in operation.

In this same year the cost of the premier's office was $331,340 making a total of $511,145. In the present government, these two departments are combined into the single function of the premier's office, which in the fiscal year 1977-78 cost $553,458. This makes an actual increase in cost of the premier's office, since the present government took over, of $42,313. This amount can be accounted for by the present rate of inflation.

I do not support or participate in mud-slinging, but I do object heartily to half-truths being used to discredit either governments or individuals. — Vivienne Clarke, 555 Riel Place.

Stay at Home

Re: women in the workplace:

It is increasingly important in these times of high unemployment and inflation to recognize that very many people are not suffering from society's ills. They are the working couples that bring two incomes to a household.

Indeed, their ease of adjustment to the problems we all face largely results from the cause of those problems. Regardless of side issues about liberation of housepersons, if either one of these twosomes did not work we might solve a great deal. We'd have more jobs for those who really need them, less frivolous spending which leads to much of our economic strife and much more respect for the family and a meaningful way of life.

If greed must be a way of life for some then let those persons remain single and pay a price for their affluence. The real losers today are those unfortunate souls who wish to start a family and are faced with the pressures of our modern society.

I am not against women in the workplace; I just hope for the sake of us all that their husbands are at home. — L. M. Wagar, P.Eng., 205-105 Gorge Road East.

Great Bonfire

Eric, Hans and I were lucky to have been a part of a wonderful Halloween celebration at the Oak Bay fire hall.

I would appreciate being able to say thank you publicly. The firemen, Kinsmen and the police department really worked hard to make a special night for everyone.

To the Oak Bay fire department:

"My little leopard and blue beaver are snugly tucked into their beds dreaming about the wonderful bonfire that they were so lucky to see. What a wonderful Halloween, thanks to the police, Kinsmen and your fire department. I appreciate all the effort that you put into making Halloween special and exciting.

"We are new to Victoria and this Halloween was very special for us. We haven't had as much fun as this ever — music, marching, prizes, treats, hot dogs and pop — wow!

"Thank you for a very nice evening." — Joan, Hans and Eric Kurth, 1020 Pentrelew Place.

Fix Private Camps

W. A. and J. Y. Coultans' suggestion (Those Pit Toilets; Times, Oct. 26) that private campsite facilities be upgraded is reasonable because they provide, for a higher fee, the comforts and conveniences of home that some campers desire, e.g. flush toilets, showers, water and electric hookups.

However, national and provincial campsites have been developed and are maintained by tax dollars and, although primitive, the modest fee does keep those campsites within the reach of all campers desirous of a simple, leisurely and inexpensive holiday.

With so many more worthy demands made upon our tax dollars, upgrading national and provincial campsites should take a very low priority. — Ruby Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Litany of Woes

The litany of woes voiced by Trudeau at the premiers' conference are but a recital of the ills and follies created by his own hand.

Yet he attempts to put the blame on others, tries to bully them into resolving his problems for him, and to hand him his revolution on a platter, toute suite, if you please, as though it is his divine right.

Who the hell does he think he is? And what a bunch of fools he regards the public as being! — F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

I am very sorry you have changed the format of your television programs.

The old format was much better and simpler. We don't want or need the details of each item, all we want is the headings such as news, Lawrence Welk, sports, etc.

Hope you will reconsider your action. — G. W. Robinson, 3069 Henderson Road.

Are the Russians a Threat to Canada or Aren't They?

DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The gulf between the senior officers of the RCMP and the Trudeau ministry became apparent last week through evidence at the McDonald inquiry by former RCMP commissioner Higgitt.

Whether one is on one side or the other side, or a skeptical neutral, we should all realize the forces which tend to separate the government and its security service.

For example, last week Milolai Patolichev, the U.S.S.R. trade minister, signed a pact with Jack Horner, our trade minister, which, as the blurb put it, "launched a long-term program of economic, industrial, scientific and technical co-operation."

Even his former right-wing pals in the Tory party are unlikely to see Jack Horner as a "pinko" or a "soft" liberal, debauched by the Soviet pressure for "detente." Yet the key premise of the security arm of the RCMP is that the top threat to Canada's security from espionage or through domestic subversion or by terrorist groups is from the U.S.S.R. and its allies.

Let me illustrate from arguments to be found in a paper floating around Ottawa which seems to have been prepared by the Security Service of the RCMP.

The policy of detente, goes the argument, while seeming to offer the prospect of a relaxation of tension, more understanding and political and economic advantage, should not obscure the intention of the U.S.S.R. to intensify the ideological struggle with the eventual object of shifting the balance of power in the Soviet favor.

The Security Service insists that the U.S.S.R. pays Canada increasing attention because it sees it can get from us the advanced technology to improve its own economic strength. Russian Intelligence Service (RIS) activities in Canada have gone up, not down, since "detente." And detente enables the Russians to use "legitimate ways and means" to get the intelligence they want in Canada.

Because the U.S.S.R. has closed the strategic gap with the U.S. and the West, the more important determinants for the future are in non-military technological and economic and political information.

The Security Service asserts that few Soviet citizens abroad are not actively engaged in meeting the U.S.S.R. objective of world hegemony: "The Russian Intelligence Service remains active and aggressive on a global scale in pursuit of intelligence." The service has detailed the astounding growth in Soviet visitors to Canada and in Soviet officials posted to Canada.

The Security Service is concerned that the RIS is employing more sophisticated and better-qualified personnel in Canada than ever before. Further, under the guise of scientific and technological exchange, another intelligence dimension has been added by the U.S.S.R. In its studying and infiltrating of Canada and its institutions, it does not have to depend solely on direct work of RIS agents.

Our Security Service believes that the myriad contacts being developed between Canada and the U.S.S.R. under the direct sponsorship of Horner's department (industry, trade and commerce) and our National Research Council are inequitable because of the differences between the Soviet and Canadian societies. That is, our scientists and bureaucrats co-operate fully with information, even providing instruments and machines, whereas the Russians, at the operational level below the negotiators and the exchangers of niceties, give little back.

Can you see the gulf, the real distance between the ministry and the RCMP Security Service? These are the views of an agency of the same government which had Jack Horner sign another pact last week with the Soviets.

The RCMP describes a rising U.S.S.R. intelligence power here that is, "more sophisticated, has "broader interests" and is "highly successful." This "formidable adversary" had "handed off" some intelligence chores to other Warsaw Pact countries and to Cuba.

The adversaries of the U.S.S.R., say our Security Service, have failed to recognize or have overlooked the fact that detente provides the Soviets with ways and means of obtaining the intelligence they require.

Ignore for a moment whether or not you believe the U.S.S.R. is still the threat to us which the Security Service of the RCMP takes as proven.

Consider a government committed to detente, and whose prime minister and ministers cultivate economic and technological exchanges with the U.S.S.R. Not only does the government ignore the basic threat which its security arm fears, it furthers the very activities which the security arm warns are to the advantage of the U.S.S.R. in its quest for world domination.

Surely there must be misunderstanding and occasional confrontation between different parts of the same system where there is such a basic difference in judgment of the U.S.S.R.

An Advance For N-Power

THE ECONOMIST

FALLDIN . . . his opposition failed

For the first time, a government has been brought down by a dispute over nuclear policy. Many people, at least in the western world, think of opposition either to nuclear arms or to nuclear energy as a phenomenon of the left. But this is too simple a view, as is vividly shown by the resignation last month of the Swedish prime minister, Thorbjorn Falldin. A doughty anti-nuclear crusader, Falldin was also the head of his country's first non-socialist government since 1932, and his fall leaves the door wide open for the early return to power of a Social Democratic party which wants to see Sweden equipped with more nuclear energy per head than any other nation.

Germany too

The collapse of the Falldin coalition was followed three days later by a related event in the West German state election in Hesse. One of the anxieties of the Social Democrats and Free Democrats, ruling in coalition there as in Bonn, concerned the risk of losing votes to the "Green" parties whose ecological doctrines include opposition to nuclear energy. The Free Democrats, in particular, believed that the "green" intervention in two other state elections held in June had cost them dear. In the upshot, "Red Hesse" showed no wish to turn green; the eco-vote there was only 2 per cent, half of what it had been in Lower Saxony and Hamburg in June (even so, it was more than twice the size of the vote that the communist and neo-Nazi parties combined got from the level-headed Hessians).

In this year's voting in France, as well as in West Germany, the ecologists' intervention would have attracted very little attention if the balance of forces between much more formidable political groups had not looked like being so near equilibrium. In such circumstances even a feather can tip the electoral scales. It has fallen to Sweden to show that the nuclear energy issue can put a decisive weight of its own into those scales. In various other countries, at various times, this issue has contributed to the changing of relative party strengths, to new combinations of interest groups or to the emergence of new factions. In several countries — notably, in recent years in Mrs. Gandhi's India, Bhutto's Pakistan and General Geisel's Brazil — the pursuit of nuclear ambitions with little regard to the danger of arms proliferation has created a new form of political machismo. But not until last month has a change of government been clearly and solely attributable to the nuclear issue.

There is no doubt that that is what happened in Stockholm. The three parties in the Falldin coalition were divided about many things, but they had shown an ability to sink all their differences except one. As Sweden's first non-socialist government in more than 40 years, they had the strongest of reasons for holding together: failure to do so would give, and now probably has given, the Social Democrats an excellent chance of coming back to power for perhaps two or three more decades. But, after two years in office, the government could no longer evade the nuclear energy issue. Falldin's own Centre party did not want any more power reactors; the other coalition parties insisted on more; the possibilities of manoeuvre were eventually exhausted, and the break came.

The military aspects of the nuclear age were in no way involved in the dispute. The Swedes agreed long ago to eschew nuclear weapons; they were early and eager adherents to the non-proliferation treaty. Nor was any crude national machismo involved. In Swedish eyes, nuclear energy does not look like a national virility symbol; more like a warm quilt. Sweden, with its cold dark winters, long distances, high standards of living and highly developed industries, is an energy-hungry country which has neither coal nor oil and has long since harnessed practically all its hydro-power potential. In 1974 the great oil price increase revealed to the horrified Swedes that they had become the world's heaviest consumers of imported oil. In 1975 their Social Democratic government got parliamentary approval for a 13-reactor program which was designed to make them the world's heaviest consumers of nuclear energy.

Clear majority

Falldin's Centre party voted against this program. Except for the Communists, it was alone in doing so. It fought the 1976 election on an anti-nuclear platform. But the common belief that it was swept to victory on that platform is ill-founded. In fact it lost four seats; it was the electoral gains made by the other non-socialist parties that produced a parliamentary majority for the Falldin coalition. And since then the pro-nuclear forces in Sweden have, according to the opinion polls, built up a clear majority they have long had in the Riksdag.

The new message from Sweden is not necessarily a message for the whole world (nor even for the whole of Scandinavia; Denmark, whose natural energy resources are even scanter than Sweden's, has not built or even planned to build a single reactor). And even if the Swedes are now back on the nuclear track, they look like following it with characteristic anxiety, worrying most particularly (and rightly) about the disposal of reactor products and praying, like sensible people everywhere, for an early fusion breakthrough to save the world from the nightmare of weapons-grade plutonium becoming a staple item in international trade.

When all that has been said, however, it is still clear that the Falldin chapter is closed and that the portents from Stockholm are not of a kind to encourage the world's campaigners against nuclear energy.

What's a Tax Bill Without Loopholes?

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — It's time someone told Ottawa's finance department that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line — without any loopholes.

In August, when the government announced its new refundable tax credit program, it said that only families with incomes of $18,000 or less would be eligible for the maximum credit of $200 per child. For every $100 of income over $18,000, the credit would be reduced by $5.

The same description of the program was contained in the pamphlet which accompanied October family allowance cheques. For those not very good at arithmatic, the welfare department brochure even had tables showing how much the credit would be reduced to at various income levels over $18,000.

Meanwhile, the finance department officials who were preparing the legislation were quietly building all their favorite tax loopholes into the income limits.

The result, in the bill that is now before Parliament, is that while income over $18,000 will indeed mean a reduction in the amount of credit for some families, others with incomes approaching $30,000 will be receiving the full credit.

To you or me or anyone else in the real world, income means income. To the folks at finance, things aren't as simple as that.

According to the tables in the welfare department pamphlet, at $26,000 income a two-child family's tax credit is reduced to zero.

But, according to the finance department bill, if the family takes maximum advantage of its retirement savings and home ownership savings plan deductions, it will still qualify for the full $400 credit in spite of its $26,000 income.

In a week when the Economic Council of Canada, in its 1978 annual review, observed that the proportion of government social benefits payments received by the poor has fallen from 45 per cent to 29 per cent, perhaps I shouldn't get upset about 10 per cent or so of child tax credit benefits winding up in higher income hands than was advertised.

After all, the Economic Council managed to be philosophical about its findings. Social policies "mirror the consensus of voter desires," it said, noting that the majority of voters are non-poor.

But in this case, voter desires has nothing to do with it. From my admittedly-limited survey of cabinet ministers it would appear that the politicians were not even aware of the "technical adjustments" in the program.

The finance department technocratsinsist that conceptual symmetry, administrative simplicity and who-knows-what-else requires that the deductions not be ignored, even if that means some taxpayers wind up with windfall gains and the treasury with commensurate losses.

Even if the finance department draughtsmen get their way — which they may not, since the bill could be amended in the House — the refundable child tax credit will be a major breakthrough for income redistribution in this country.

Its importance comes not from the relatively modest amounts of money involved, but from its representing the first provision Canada's tax system has ever made for including those below the taxpaying threshold in the distribution of tax-cut benefits.

Finance Minister Jean Chretien has described the innovation as "important," and a potential precurser of future developments.

Could the loophole makers in his department be fearing the prospect of obsolescence for their craft — like modern-day blacksmiths faced with the appearance of the first automobile?

It would be nice to think so. But more likely, the only reason they slipped a few loopholes into the concrete in laying the foundation for the new program was simply force of habit.

STRAY FEATHERS

Rare Sandpipers Arrive at Pond

Last weekend was a weekend of "firsts" for me — three Ancient Murrelets in the outer harbor and two sharp-tailed sandpipers at a reservoir in Central Saanich.

I knew I'd get the Ancient Murrelets some day; it was only a matter of time. These little divers aren't rare, as a matter of fact there are thousands of them off the north end of Vancouver Island at this time of year, it's just that those that do find their way down to Victoria waters had, until last Saturday, carefully avoided my trail.

As for the sharp-tailed sandpipers, they're another matter. While the murrelets are common along the northeast edge of the Pacific, the sandpipers are not. And anyone hoping to get one on their life list — on this side of the Pacific — has just got to be patient and wait until one shows up and falls to the sharp eyes of some birdwatcher.

Such was the case last week when a sharp-tailed sandpiper came under the watchful gaze of Vic Goodwill at a reservoir just off Martindale Road. Word of the presence of this straggler from Siberia soon spread via Victoria's rare bird alert and by Sunday afternoon I found myself among the worshippers paying homage to a bird that could as well have been in Sakhalin, eastern China, the Philippines, the Malay Peninsula, Australia, or even New Zealand as in a muddy little pond on the Saanich Peninsula.

I arrived at the pond thinking that only one sharp-tailed sandpiper was holding court. There were actually two; another had turned up during the day to make its contribution to the general interest.

My first impression of the two birds was one of color. Sandpipers, in fall, are notoriously colorless, usually combining muted browns and grays so that one species looks much like another. Not these sharp-tails. They were much more ruddy above, and buff below, than any sandpiper I'd seen before.

They reminded me a little of a least sandpiper in spring but, thanks to two spotted sandpipers nearby, I could see that the sharp-tails were much larger than leasts. More than that, both sported a rich, almost chestnut cap which, combined with the yellowish buff below, made me think of a similar combination of colors, carried by Palm Warblers.

As for identifying the sharp-tails, I left that to sharper eyes than mine. The shorebirds as a group are the bane of many birdwatchers and I consider myself one of them. Without Vic's identification I'd have probably passed them off as odd-looking Pectoral Sandpipers — birds which are rare here in their own right but certainly not in the same league as sharp-tails.

According to the books, sharp-tailed sandpipers call eastern Siberia home in summer. In winter they are found along the shores of the western Pacific as far south as Australia and New Zealand. They also occur regularly on the Hawaiian Islands.

They're apparently sometimes abundant in fall on the Pribiloff Islands in the Bering Sea. It is probably from here that a few take a wrong turn and head down the east side of the Pacific to make birdwatchers from San Diego to Sandspit sit up and take notice.

It is also possible that without those muddy, grass-lined reservoirs of Central Saanich, Victoria birdwatchers might have to forego the joy of seeing sharp-tailed sandpipers as often as they do, because sharp-tails are birds of such wet, grassy places and not of the open rocky coast.

But those reservoirs serve birdwatchers in another way; among the few fresh-water locations on this part of Vancouver Island, they tend to attract stragglers like sharp-tailed sandpipers, making them much easier for birdwatchers like me to find.

Killer Appeals

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Murray Madsen, convicted of murdering four Rosedale teen-agers in April, began appeal proceedings Friday in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Madsen's lawyer said the appeal will be based on the contention that the trial judge did not adequately instruct the jury on the defence of insanity.

The lawyer contended during the trial that Madsen, 24, of Chilliwack, was not guilty by reason of insanity.

Madsen was given a life sentence with no opportunity for parole for 25 years.

Logging Plan Ignores Rules

The plan to log the Tsitika River watershed contravenes the intent of new provincial forest legislation, says Sierra Club spokesman Bob Nixon.

A moratorium on logging the 84,839-acre valley situated on the north east coast of Vancouver Island was lifted this week, allowing clear cutting of its slopes.

Nixon said the new Forests Act clearly sets forth the specific purposes and functions of the government's forest service.

And he claimed a white paper of July, 1978, on forest yield regulations and timber supply area, sets forth a high standard of economic and environment review which was not applied in the Tsitika plan.

"The Sierra club warned the government that the acid test of implementing B.C.'s new era in rational forest management must begin with the Tsitika," he said.

Printer of Express Threatened

COQUITLAM (CP) — Columbian publisher Rikk Taylor said Friday he received an implied business threat from the president of the Employers' Council of British Columbia over his company's decision to print The Express, a newspaper produced by striking and locked out employees of Pacific Press Ltd.

Taylor said he received a phone call Thursday from William Hamilton, president of the Employers' Council, expressing concern that the Columbian had contracted to print The Express.

Hamilton said in a telephone interview from Edmonton that no threat was intended, but Taylor said he regarded Hamilton's statements "to me on the telephone and to the press as an implied threat."

"It sounded like some kind of intimidation for Craftsmen Printers not to print."

The Express published its first edition Friday, using the facilities of Craftsmen Printers, a division of The Columbian company. The Columbian is an evening daily newspaper serving surburban Vancouver.

Taylor, recounting the phone conversation, said he "pointed out that selling printing is Craftmen's business."

"Hamilton said 'yes' but didn't I think we were interfering in a strike-lockout on the side of one party.

"He mentioned that he represents major companies who meet to discuss major problems."

Hamilton said he was seeking information for the council's industrial relations bulletin.

"We track developments in all kinds of labor disputes. When reporters, printers and so on set up their own publishing business we need this kind of information to keep our members up to date."

Hamilton said that when he expressed the council's concern about the situation, Taylor "suddenly went wild saying I was trying to threaten him."

Taylor said The Columbian will continue to print The Express.

Pacific Press, which produces the Vancouver Sun and Province newspapers, ceased publication Wednesday in a contract dispute with its 1,400 employees who belong to six unions. No talks are scheduled.

Pacific Press employees plan to publish The Express, a morning newspaper, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Alex Young, a senior Province reporter who is managing editor of The Express, said Friday's press run was more than 100,000 copies of which about 94,000 were sold.

A main issue in the dispute is the number of men needed to work on the presses.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 18-year-old was jailed nine months after pleading guilty Friday in provinciaal court to two drug offences.

David Bruce Reeves, 975 Fairfield, admitted trafficking in marijuana, and possession of hashish for the purpose of trafficking.

Court was told on Oct. 18 RCMP drug squad undercover agents went to Reeves' residence Sept. 13 and bought four Thai sticks of marijuana for $50.

Reeves was arrested following the transaction and a search of the apartment produced 111 more sticks and a vial of hash oil.

Judge William Ostler also placed Reeves on 18 months probation.

A 17-year-old was fined $75 and ordered to pay for half the damages to a telephone booth.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told Judge Fred Green that Thynn and a companion entered the booth at Burnside and Albion at about 1:25 a.m., Aug. 9, and used the telephone.

One of them then damaged the dial, Mulligan said, and Thynn threw a rock through the glass, causing a total damage of $50.

When asked by Green for a reason for the act, Thynn had no answer but nodded when Green suggested alcohol.

Judge Blake Allan described an assault trial as most unusual and unsatisfactory because neither the victim nor the accused person were called to testify before he dismissed the charge against a woman.

Marie Martin was cleared of a charge of assault causing bodily harm to Joyce Ratcliffe in a March 27 incident outside Coffee Mac's restaurant, 617 Gorge Road East.

A 25-year-old man was given 14 and seven-day concurrent jail terms after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing a breath test demand.

Court was informed Oak Bay police spotted Jagjit Singh Randhawa, 210 Skinner, at Fort and Foul Bay at about 2:15 a.m. Oct. 9 when Randhawa's vehicle didn't move during a green traffic light change.

After Randhawa finally proceeded, he was followed and was noted travelling between 20 and 25 mph and crossing the centre line four times.

Randhawa was convicted of impaired driving on March 12, 1976, in Victoria and was fined $450.

* * *

Fined $150 for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 Oct. 18 was Donna Marie Fenlon, 4061 Larchwood. She was also placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Basques Stump At Movie Houses

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Six Basque guerrillas stopped the shows in two movie houses to read statements against the new Spanish constitution approved by parliament.

They addressed the audiences with megaphones after overpowering employees in the two theatres, authorities said. A referendum on the constitutional proposal is expected Dec. 6.

$46,560 AWARD IN SHOOTING

Damages totalling $46,560 have been awarded by a B.C. Supreme Court judge to a 19-year-old Central Saanich man accidentally shot in the back more than two years ago.

Mr. Justice Samuel Toy said in a written decision that Scott Harold Henderson, 6560 Rey, was shot Feb. 24, 1976, and the bullet went through his lung and just above his heart.

Only prompt medical attention saved his life, the judge said.

Liability was admitted by Warren Arthur Lewis, 5004 Prospect Lake, and David John Oldridge, 7022 Bichstan.

Henderson lost the upper and half the middle lobe of his right lung and was hospitalized on two occasions. He missed going to the University of Victoria for one year and Toy made an allowance of $3,000 in his judgment for this.

Murder Trial Adjourned

Trial of a 40-year-old farm laborer accused of second degree murder of a fellow worker adjourned abruptly Friday afternoon in B.C. Supreme Court.

Avtar Singh Gill, testifying on his own behalf, was being questioned by his counsel Tim Singh of Duncan about what happened June 26 at a potato farm in Central Saanich.

After giving his account, Singh asked Gill if he knew what charge he was facing.

"No I don't," Gill replied through Punjabi interpreter Manjit Dhariwal.

The jury was immediately excused for discussions in court between Singh, Crown counsel Donald Laughton and Mr. Justice James Macdonald. Matters heard in the absence of the jury while a trial is in progress cannot be published.

The jury was then called back and Macdonald said only that it was going to be necessary to adjourn and the case will resume Monday at 10 a.m.

Gill was accused of second degree murder following the death in hospital June 26 of Joseph Pelkey, 54.

He said farmer Vern Michell picked him and some others up in a truck at a city shopping centre and drove them to Central Saanich. Gill said he arrived at 8:10 a.m. and joined two men and four women hoeing potatoes near Island View Beach.

He was behind and close to Pelkey and a man he called Sandy and whose description matched that of an earlier witness, Eric Henry.

Gill said Pelkey approached him and said "f--- you Hindo" and "f--- Hindu" and punched him under the chin making him fall down. When he stood up, Pelkey had returned to his potato row.

Asked if he did anything or said anything to Pelkey before this, he replied: "I not talk to him at all."

After this incident, Gill said he resumed hoeing and completed his row.

Then he started a second potato row which he finished. Pelkey went 14 rows away and drank from a bottle which was sitting in the grass and then resumed work.

After the third potato row was finished, the women workers left for another part of the field and he started working two rows going towards the sea with Sandy and Pelkey to his right side and behind him also hoeing.

He said Pelkey approached him and said "f--- you Hindu" and raised his middle finger and struck him on the side of the head.

Asked if he said or did anything before Pelkey approached him, he replied "no." Then he was swearing at me and yelling at me, very bad words, I understand some of them, f--- you Hindu, f--- Hindu, bad Hindu. He said this many times giving me the middle finger."

He said Sandy struck him with a hoe and he fell to the ground. He said he got up and walked to his lunchbox about 20 feet away and took out a three-inch knife he said he used to cut apples with and held it in his right hand.

Pelkey, he said, was staring at him and saying something, mumbling. Then Pelkey struck him with a hoe, he said. "And then I tried to strike him but I didn't strike him. Then we swinging the hoes. Then we stood apart from each other. Then we kept standing. Nothing happened afterwards."

He said Pelkey and Sandy walked to the corner of the cauliflowers and potatoes and he resumed hoeing.

Under further questioning from his counsel, Gill said he didn't use the knife at any time and, asked if he was struck by Pelkey's hoe, replied "he tried but he missed."

He said he took the knife from his lunchbox "for my protection. The two men were going to kill me." He felt this because Pelkey had struck him on the chin.

Asked on how many occasions he and Pelkey fought, he replied "no fight." Asked if he knew what happened to Pelkey, he said "I don't know."

He said he saw an ambulance come but he didn't know why and didn't know if he saw it take someone away.

He said the knife was lost the same day before police arrived. Asked if he knew how it got lost, he said: "No I don't know."

Appeal Allowed On Pot Charge

A provincial court conviction of 21-year-old Ian David Brenton for driving while impaired by marijuana was quashed Friday on appeal to county court Judge T.G. Darling.

He ruled that provincial court Judge Blake Allan made an error in law. But because there was some evidence at trial, he directed that a new trial be held.

Brenton, of 9125 East Saanich, was convicted by Allan April 6 and fined $450.

During the trial, Brenton's counsel, William McElmoyle, who also presented the appeal, argued that there was no evidence that marijuana impaired a person's ability to drive nor was there any evidence of poor driving by his client.

He said the court alone could not take notice that the effect of marijuana impaired one's ability to drive.

Darling said he did not think that the assumption can be made, without any medical evidence, of the effect of marijuana on someone's ability to drive. It was not a matter of such common knowledge to permit this assumption, he said.

3-Year Pen Term on Gross Indecency Charge

A 40-year-old Esquimalt man was sentenced in county court Friday to three years in the penitentiary for gross indecency against a five-year-old girl last April.

Judge Montague Drake told Roger Raynaud Brummell there is little the court can do except provide for the protection of the public.

But he recommended the term be served at the federal institution at Matsqui which Crown counsel Wayne Smith said is the only institution in B.C. which can assist sexually-maladjusted people.

In convicting Brummell, Drake said it was unlike most cases because there was no evidence from the complainant. The only real evidence was a confession to a person who was a family friend.

He said Brummell's testimony that he said it simply to protect the child from her mother made no sense.

Smith said Brummell was on two probation orders at the time of the offence and reports indicated sexual maladjustment. He described Brummell as a definite threat to society in general and to young girls in particular.

In other cases, Drake said he didn't know if he took the same view as a provincial court judge who imposed a nominal one day in jail and two years probation for a co-accused in a breaking and entering and theft at a Munns Road house Dec. 22.

John Raymond Marks, 19, of Sidney, pleaded guilty to the break-in. He has no criminal record.

Drake said, however, that it would be most unfair to do anything other than what the earlier judge had done, so he ordered one day in jail and two years probation.

Lisa Sam Parent, 18, who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering with intent at a sporting goods shop at 770 Yates March 24, was given a suspended sentence and 18 months probation.

Music Notebook: Vivaldi Concert Friday

Bernard Turgeon, noted Canadian baritone who is at present a visiting professor with the University of Victoria music faculty, will appear with the Canadian Opera Company in Tchaikovsky's Joan of Arc on CBC TV, Nov.9 at 8 p.m.

The performance will be telecast live from the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and is the COC's first televised presentation.

Turgeon will be singing the role of Dunois in the English language version of the opera.

The Early Music series of concerts presented by the Faculty Baroque Ensemble of Victoria Conservatory of Music will perform the second concert in the series at Craigdarroch Castle Friday at 8 p.m. The theme for this season is the tercentenary of Antonio Vivaldi.

From his large output of brilliant concerti, Friday's program will offer the best known and loved work, The Four Seasons. The solo violin part will be performed by Sydney Humphreys who, with James Kennedy (recorder and baroque flute) forms the nucleus of the ensemble.

At Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort, a recital will be given by composer-pianist Lubomyr Melnyk, Wednesday at 9 p.m.

Melnyk is a young Canadian composer who has attracted attention in Canada and Europe for his technique of "continuous piano playing." His expression and approach have introduced new concepts and dimensions to the potential of piano technique, while the spiritual energy of his composition makes his work unique in the music world.

General admission to the recital is $2, half-price for students and Open Space members.

A free public concert by the University of Victoria Wind Symphony will feature selections from George Gershwin's black folk opera, Porgy and Bess, as well as works by Holst, Gianini and Gabrieli.

The concert is scheduled to take place Thursday at 8 p.m. in the University Centre Auditorium under the sponsorship of UVic music department.

Saxophonist Lynne Greenwood, a music faculty member, will be featured soloist in the Gershwin excerpts. Also appearing with conductor Jesse Read and the symphony is the University Brass Ensemble which, under the direction of Louis Ranger, will perform two Gabrieli pieces; Canzona XVI and Canzona Noni Toni a 12. VanIsle Opera Audition

Males with good strong voices are needed for the chorus of yeomen in Gilbert and Sullivan's The Yeomen of the Guard, the choice of the Vancouver Island Opera Association for its February production.

The most serious need, however, is for a tenor suitable for the role of the hero, Fairfax, who under sentence of death escapes from the Tower of London. Also being sought is a bass-baritone for Sgt. Merrill and a bass for the part of Cholmondley. Anyone interested should call the VanIsle Opera office to arrange for an audition.

Two Wind Quintet Recitals

The Pacific Wind Quintet will perform works from Cambini, Ginastera, Martinon and Canadian composer Norman Sherman at a recital Sunday at 2:30 p.m., and again Monday at 8 p.m. Both performances will take place in the recital hall of the new University of Victoria music building.

The repeat performance is part of the dinner-music series, but interested persons may attend the recital without taking in the dinner. This series of dinner-music evenings comes under the umbrella of the Division of Extension's expressive arts offerings. The fee of $11 per person includes a social hour, dinner at the University Faculty Centre, and an informal introduction to the performance by a speaker. The evening begins at 5:45 p.m. Persons interested in this must register at the Division of University Extension office located in the University Centre.

For those wishing to attend only the recital, tickets at $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens are available at the music department office or at the door.

The Pacific Wind Quintet, UVic's only in-residence ensemble, was formed in 1973 and has toured the island and mainland giving concerts and conducting workshops. It has done several CBC broadcasts and appeared in concert in some of the major cities in the Pacific Northwest.

Fine Line Players

Currently playing at the Eric Martin Institute Theatre, 2328 Trent, is a production of the S.N. Behrman comedy, End of Summer. The presentation, directed by Thomas Smith, is a presentation of the Fine Line Players. The group is comprised of friends, relatives, staff and associates of the Day Program at Eric Martin.

Little more than one year old, the Fine Line Players have already produced four plays — The Last Analysis by Saul Bellow, which played to sell-out audiences; The Pawnshop by Guy Hamel, and The Dumbwaiter by Harold Pinter, two short theatre of the absurd plays, and most recently the 20s comedy, Holiday, by Philip Barry.

End of Summer tells of the efforts of Leonie Frothingham to surround herself with friends and family, including a strange assortment of people she invites to stay in her wealthy mother's summer home.

There will be a performance tonight and Monday through Thursday at 8 p.m.

New McPherson Playhouse Policy Proves a Success

The rationale behind the transference of operation of the McPherson Playhouse 18 months ago, from the city to a foundation formed of prominent Victoria citizens, was based mainly on financial considerations.

It had been convincingly reasoned in a plan brought forward by Community Arts Council immediate past-president Allan Purdy and supported initially by Alderman Ron MacKenzie, that this management concept would change what had consistently been a deficit operation to at least a break-even one and would open the way to many financial and other benefits for the city-owned playhouse.

Adoption of the concept by mayor and aldermen established the city as landlord to the group of 12 (including two aldermen appointed by the mayor) and designated as the McPherson Playhouse Foundation. The theatre's urbane and popular manager, John Dyck, party to the plan and enthusiastic about it, became executive director. Much more than simply a change in title, this involved increased responsibility and authority.

It was a unique move on the city's part but a move that has succeeded beyond even the hopes and vision of Purdy and MacKenzie and the convictions of Dyck.

Naturally there are exceptions to the general chorus of praise for what has been achieved by the Foundation — mostly from specific interest groups that feel they are not being served to the fullest extent they would wish.

The Foundation, on the other hand, views its terms of reference as being to make the McPherson a total community-oriented facility, self-supporting and of maximum benefit to all the people who use it and visit it.

In taking the theatre out of the city-owned rental facility category, the concept immediately made grant applications possible and opened the way to other financial benefits as well as fund-raising self-support projects.

PURDY
. . . his plan

Last week saw the unusual occurrence of a large number of Victoria's most prominent artists and ensembles, both professional and amateur, co-operating in two gala evenings at the McPherson. All were donating their services as a benefit, the proceeds in this instance to go into the fund for renewing the theatre's seating. (The actual seating in the McPherson dates a long way back before the renovation of the theatre in 1963, at which time the seats were merely refurbished with citizen donations, the general renovation budget having run out.)

Last weekend's two concerts, which ran as smoothly as though they had been thoroughly rehearsed (no rehearsal at all was possible), had sell-out audiences both nights and netted over $4,000 for the seat fund. The event was evidence of a heartening amount of goodwill toward the McPherson and its foundation members, particularly as most of the artists expressed thanks to Dyck and the foundation for giving them the opportunity to assist by performing.

At the second concert on Saturday, Recreation and Conservation minister Sam Bawlf was present and made public a grant of $54,000 from the recreational facilities fund. This was the provincial contribution to the superb Strand computerized stage-lighting system which puts the Playhouse on a par with the Stratford Festival Theatre and the National Arts Centre. Under the supervision of technical director Larry Eastick, installation became complete scarcely an hour before the first concert began and operated virtually without a flaw both nights.

The system has been installed at a cost of $180,000, a cost completely covered by a three-way split between the provincial government, the city and the foundation. Bawlf was highly complimentary about the operation of the theatre and the fiscal responsibility shown by the foundation which makes sure that the money was available before embarking on any project. Technically speaking, the system and its installation has received the commendation of one of Victoria's top stage-lighting experts, Jack Trueman, lighting designer for Bastion Theatre. Trueman, well known as an authority throughout the community and widely travelled, says the McPherson now has one of the best lighting systems in the world and also commends the installation and positioning of the control console as "excellent".

Last Saturday's proceedings at the McPherson are to be telecast on Channel 10 Nov. 12 at 12:30 p.m. and on Nov. 23 at 8 p.m.

Changes in the theatre's function and physical properties have been numerous since the foundation took over. It has been entirely re-carpeted, space has been created to accommodate wheelchairs; television monitors have been installed in the lobbies and backstage and art gallery space ~~has~~ been established in co-operation with the arts and crafts community and with the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

There is also the free noon-hour entertainment series provided in collaboration with Community Arts Council and Victoria Conservatory of Music and many other ways under the designations of "services" and "special programs" in which the theatre is active. Included are children's theatre projects, school showcase programs, the popular meet-the-cast parties, theatre and backstage tours, a free mail-out service for arts organizations and meeting space.

Among immediate future priorities, installation of a high quality sound system rates among the top two or three after seating is completed. According to foundation chairman Purdy, both public and private response to the playhouse has been constant and enthusiastic. He notes that B.C.Tel has donated $2,000, the Koerner Foundation has pledged $1,000 towards the noon concerts and private donations for the seat refurbishing have come along in a steady flow.

Also included in this month's financial report is an $8,000 Community Projects Grant from the B.C. Cultural Fund.

One area in which somebody in the community could assist the theatre would be in the matter of a baby grand piano. The McPherson desperately needs such a piano for the upper mezzanine for its noon-hour musical events. Executive director Dyck suggests that anyone with a baby grand not in use and perhaps taking up too much room might consider lending it to the McPherson, where it will be comfortably housed and lovingly used while providing pleasure and satisfaction.

'Slavery' For Debts

NEW DELHI (AP) — About 2.24 million Indians work illegally as bonded laborers trying to work off debts under conditions little better than slavery, says a government-sponsored report.

The report, based on a five-month study by the Gandhi Peace Foundation and the National Labor Institute said bonded labor flourishes in 10 of India's 22 states. About 40 per cent of those in bondage, most of whom are farm workers, originally owed their employers less than $35, the report said. But high interest rates and low wages, often less than $10 a month, keep them trying to work their way out of debt for years.

Liza Bear from the Send/Receive Satellite Network project of New York will be a special guest at Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort, Thursday at 8 p.m. She will present a program of her own videotapes and a discussion of satellite communications and the collaborative process.

Included in the program is the 21-minute videotape Phase One, by Keith Sonnier and Bear. In color, it was shot in New York and is made up of three two-dimensional sets created from satellite and telephone iconography. Bear has a strong interest in the collaborative process and has done many projects of this nature. She is also interested in creating a network for future satellite link-ups.

Also included in the tape showing is Cross-Talk, an internal dialogue developed for an interactive medium Slow-Scan video computer.

This event is open to the public and admission is free.

Recent drawings and paintings by William Porteous will go on view at Kyle's Gallery, 1545 Fort, Sunday. Hours will be 12 noon to 10 p.m.

Porteous has lived and worked in Victoria since immigrating here in 1974. His work centres on an exploration of the human figure as a form inseparable from other forms in nature, often uniting it with landscape. His drawings are sensitive and expressive, frequently having sensuous or lyrical qualities. In his paintings the artist creates internal landscapes which evoke the essence of his surroundings.

The exhibition continues for one month, with regular hours Tuesday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

* * *

The show will continue on view through Nov. 25.

Featured at the University of Victoria Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery for the next two weeks will be the work of UVic visual arts students. Organized by the students, it is a collection of art executed in a variety of mediums. Included in the display are sculpture, painting, photography, drawing and print-making. Some 24 students are showing more than 45 pieces of work.

The gallery is open Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is in the new University Centre Building and adjacent to the auditorium. There are special evening hours and weekend openings arranged to coincide with performing arts events in the auditorium.

The exhibition will continue through Nov. 15.

Greek Dances

Dance in Greece has a powerful tradition, being both a form of entertainment and a cause of interaction among the population. Each region has created its own unique dances and music.

From the extravagance of male physical prowess expressed in stunningly acrobatic leaps and convolutions, and wickedly intricate dances performed with flashing scythes, to the unrivalled grace and vitality of the women, the Parthenon Dancers of Greece provide a pulse-stirring evening, as those who saw the company here in two brilliant performances three years ago will confirm.

Return of the company to Victoria in two performances at the Royal Theatre Wednesday will almost certainly turn out to be a high point among dance events this season.

Formed in 1956, the Parthenon Dancers have toured throughout Europe and North America with a repertoire of music and dance so rich and varied that virtually no two performances are exactly alike.

American critics have raved over the "sumptuous richness and trappings" (New York Times) of this company. The two Victoria performances will take place at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Special discounts for senior citizens and students will be available at the earlier show.

Gregory Peck as the infamous Dr. Mengele

Boys from Brazil: Confusion, but no Suspense

Imagine 94 replicas of Adolf Hitler roaming the world, waiting until the right time to step forward and take command. That's the cherished dream of demented Nazi doctor Josef Mengele in novelist Ira Levin's thriller The Boys From Brazil, brought to the screen by Sir Lew Grade.

Horror over the possibility that the dream could come true through mononuclear reproduction, or cloning, is created in Levin's book; that horror is dulled considerably in the movie version.

Mengele, called the Angel of Death for his experiments on humans and the extermination of 300,000 Jews at Auschwitz, was never caught and tried as a Nazi war criminal. He is the central character in Boys and the only living scientist who has perfected the cloning technique. Mengele is living, along with other rich former Nazis, in Paraguay and building up a neo-Nazi movement.

A Movie Review

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Directed by Academy Award winner Franklin Schaffner, the film falters because it is confusing. There are too many puzzles in Heywood Gould's screenplay and not enough explanation. At first it is difficult to sort out the good guys from the bad guys and there is too much jumping back and forth between Brazilian jungles, the United States, England and other assorted European countries. Suspense should be created by the main characters, but they are too busy over-acting and trying to master German accents to give much credibility to their roles.

The only one who is sinister is Gregory Peck as Mengele, who manages to look properly evil in his first role as screen villain.

The grey-haired and distinguished James Mason is unconvincing as Mengele's superior Colonel Seibert. Mason can't submerge his beautiful English speaking voice and exudes dignity and good breeding but little else. Lilli Palmer as Lieberman's harried sister Esther doesn't contribute much either.

As for Laurence Olivier, he turns Nazi hunter Lieberman into a Jewish den mother, dispensing advice and goodwill and shuffling about in tattered old clothes. In the book Lieberman is an old man and his work no longer generates much public support, but at least he still has all his marbles.

When the two arch-foes finally meet, their face-to-face confrontation has about as much intensity as a lawn bowling tournament. And what they do to each other is plain ridiculous.

agencies, including the RCMP.

Bailey bridges and bridge material were already on the way to the stricken area, and men and equipment were standing by on all sites, he said.

"This is one place where government must move quickly, and money cannot hold back the best efforts of government to protect the people and the communities in that area."

Meanwhile, the grit and determination of several thousand persons in west-central British Columbia will be pushed to the limit in the next couple of weeks as they attempt to deal with the ravages of the recent flooding.

Despite the tremendous losses suffered and the hardships faced, the people seem to be accepting almost nonchalantly and are moving into the clean-up with a self-reliance that seems to mark smaller communities.

"In times of emergency, it's amazing how people really come together," said Shelford. "Everybody is doing extremely well considering the circumstances."

Power and telephone service were restored to most areas late Friday. The tiny resort community of Lakelse Lake, 25 kilometres south of here, was still without power today but B.C. Hydro supervisor Harry Smith said it was expected to be restored Monday.

One of the major problems — the reconstruction of transportation links between the cities of Kitimat, Terrace, Prince Rupert and Smithers — was expected to be completed today or Sunday with the arrival by ferry of several bailey bridges from Prince Rupert.

The pre-fabricated steel spans will be installed as temporary bridges to open up the highways that have been closed for three days.

Ottawa Cuts To Cost B.C. $25M Off the Bat

lems but finance ministers were angered by the approach taken by the federal government at the Ottawa conference.

There was no advance warning on what programs might be delayed or abandoned. Ottawa sprung the proposed cutbacks on the finance ministers and then left the provinces with no viable options.

"They simply told us what we would have to do."

The only thing B.C. gained from the conference, he said, was a federal decision to restrain equalization assessment grants, something Victoria has been advocating for years.

Under the formula first proposed by Ottawa, Ontario would have been eligible for $100 million in equalization assessment grants next year. This would have been the first time Ontario, a have province, would have received a grant under the program.

Ottawa began the conference by asking the provinces to alter their five-year financing agreements with the federal government. When the provinces refused, Ottawa announced it would delay a number of grant programs.

The social services program, which applies to welfare programs covered by the Canada Assistance Plan, would have provided the provinces with $100 million in the year beginning next April 1.

The community services grants, applying to neighborhood improvement sewage treatment programs and municipal incentives, would have benefited the provinces by $150 million next year.

The change in the equalization payment formula will reduce federal outlays by $56 million next year.

The cuts were proposed as part of a federal move to lop about $370 million or 3.5 per cent from its annual transfer payments to the provinces. Ottawa earlier this year announced spending cuts totalling $2.5 billion as part of an effort to reduce record federal deficits.

Quebec estimated its losses under the revised formula for next year as being between $150 million and $200 million. That would include about $40 million to $50 million from municipal grants, $40 million in social service payments and $36 million in equalization losses.

Over the Oct. 27-29 weekend police stopped 34,328 vehicles, handing out 24-hour roadside suspensions 243 times and laid 302 impaired driving charges.

One objective of the mobile breath-testing BATmobiles is to be a visible reminder to motorists who drink that the chance of getting caught is increasing all the time, Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Friday.

More Surgery Faces Ice-Thrashed Camsell

Chief engineer Bob Candow and chief officer Fayaz Ali inspect new plates covering spot where Camsell was holed

More machinery in the engine room of the icebreaker Camsell will have to be "opened up" to determine the full extent of the damage received when she was holed by Arctic ice, H.O. Buchanan, regional director of the Canadian Coast Guard, said Friday.

He had just received a report on preliminary work done by a transport survey team headed by Bill McCloy of Ottawa.

The exploratory surgery is expected to take two weeks. After extent of damage is known, tenders will be called. Buchanan said he expects bidders will have their proposals in 10 days after advertisements are placed.

He said it is yet to be determined whether any refit work will be carried out on Camsell while the engine room is being restored.

The 20-year-old Camsell cost $25 million to build and the tow from the Arctic, after she was holed Sept. 10 in Requisite Channel, 100 miles east of Cambridge Bay, cost $1 million.

District manager Larry Slaght said the Douglas, backed up by more use of helicopters, will have to fill in for Camsell while she is out of service.

If she is not back in service by March, Slaght said this coast will need a substitute to carry out one of Camsell's tasks — replacing the 9½-foot offshore buoys.

Unlike many of the larger transport icebreakers, Camsell always carries divers and their swift action after the mishap is considered the main reason she is still afloat today.

Camsell's chief engineer Robert Candow said his engine room was flooded in 18 minutes.

He and chief officer Fayaz Ali said divers Don Illings and Shaun McLaughlin played a major role in saving the ship.

They worked desperately trying to place a temporary collision mat in the two holes amidships below the waterline on Camsell's port side. Ali said the divers frequently had to come up because their regulators became iced and had to be thawed.

He has made several recommendations as a result of the mishap. One is that all department of transport Arctic vessels carry divers.

Another is that special regulators that don't freeze be supplied.

Ali also recommended proper collision mats be carried.

While the portable pumps were being used in the engine room, Ali said a serious problem was the concentration of carbon monoxide. He recommended that portable extract fans be provided to deal with this problem.

He and Candow said Camsell's work is indispensable in the western Arctic because of her shallow draft which allows her to penetrate channels while larger icebreakers must remain offshore.

Ali says when Camsell was crippled the larger icebreaker John A. Macdonald couldn't get within 40 miles of her.

Candow said it would cost at least $40 million to replace the Camsell.

He and Ali have no doubt she will be back on her regular Arctic run next summer.

"She's still got a good half-life in her," Candow said. "She'll go back to the Arctic and she'll go back in good shape."

No Worries About U.S. Beer

There have been no complaints about the American beer being sold at provincial liquor stores and the government isn't worried about having to dump any of it.

That was the word Friday from Tex Enemark, deputy minister of consumer and corporate affairs.

He said the beer, stockpiled during the summer brewery workers strike, is moving well and he is confident it will be sold before there is any danger of it going bad.

Enemark said a check last week showed there were still 400,000 cases of eight or nine different brands of U.S. beer.

At the end of the strike in late August, the liquor branch had 1.2 million cases.

Enemark said that although there is a peak shelf life of 90 days for most beer, it doesn't suddenly turn bad at the end of that period.

"The stuff doesn't all turn blue," he said. "It's not like milk."

Enemark said it will be another month or six weeks before the liquor branch will have to be concerned about the problem.

He said the branch wil become concerned if a number of consumers start complaining about the taste of the beer.

Meanwhile, now that the liquor stores are all selling Canadian beer, all B.C. brewery employees are back on the job, a union spokesman said Friday.

Budget Slash Of $300,000 For Symphony

Drastic surgery through a $300,000 budget cut will be performed on the financially ailing Victoria Symphony Orchestra, which seemed to be near death earlier this week.

The cut, representing 27 per cent of the symphony's projected expenses this year, was announced at a press conference Friday by the society's new president, stockbroker Dorothy Frost.

She said the "massive" budget reduction was an obvious first step in the symphony's plan to get its house immediately in order.

"Without this kind of demonstration of fiscal responsibility to the community we cannot hope to go to corporate and business sources and to the people of Victoria for support," she said.

Frost said despite the cutback the symphony will still have to find $181,000 to balance its budget for the remainder of the present fiscal year, which ends Aug. 31, 1979.

The financial measures were approved by the symphony's board of directors at an extraordinary meeting Thursday night.

Frost said a report to the board by its fund-raising committee outlined a number of proposals for raising the required $181,000.

She said immediate commitments, including an orchestra payroll of $35,000 and about $14,000 owed Revenue Canada, have been or are being met but did not disclose how.

Asked to elaborate how the $300,000 budget cut would be achieved, Frost said: "We're just going to cut everything across the board."

In answer to further questions she said orchestra members have indicated a willingness to renegotiate their present contract and there will "probably not" be any cuts in scheduled concerts.

Asked if the orchestra itself would be reduced she replied: "That will all be discussed."

Frost said the board had accepted the resignation of general manager Jean Hunter, whose letter of resignation "expressed reasons of health."

Board member J.J. Richards said one budget-cutting measure planned is for the symphony to vacate its present offices in Centennial Square, which it leases from the city of Victoria for $5,000.

The administrative staff will move to rent-free accommodation in the upper floor of a building at 631 Superior used by the symphony women's committee.

Richards said early fund-raising promotions will include a $25-a-head black-tie auction and buffet dinner at the Racquet Club Nov. 25 — which is expected to make $25,000 to $30,000 — and a tag day Dec. 1.

Two major financial drives are also planned for the spring, he said.

Richards said board members are confident that the drastic overhaul of the symphony's finances will strike a sympathetic chord in the community, particularly from the business sector.

"People are phoning up and saying, look, clean up your act and we'll come up with the bread," he added.

Crow Shoot 'Nonsense'

One of B.C.'s leading authorities on birds says it's "damn nonsense" for Saanich aldermen to even think about allowing a crow shoot in the municipality.

David Stirling, a member of the Victoria Natural History Society, was commenting on the offer by the North Saanich Rod and Gun Club to participate in a shoot to rid Saanich of surplus crows.

Saanich council has suggested the shoot but wants more information before making a decision.

'Is this a civilized community or not? " Stirling asked.?

"Is it reasonable to send a bunch of armed men to shoot a bird which has done no harm?"

Stirling said Ald. Ian Cass didn't know what he was talking about when he told a recent committee meeting that crows are responsible for decimating Greater Victoria's song bird population.

"There are many reasons for the decline of some small birds," he said.

"But man is the worst offender for decimating wildlife. He blames everything but himself. He blames the wolf for the decline of the cariboo and the eagle for decline of waterfowls."

Stirling said more tolerance is needed.

"Every year a lunatic fringe complains about the noise crows make," he said.

"You'd think crows have been with us for only a short time."

Stirling said if council allows a crow shoot it will have to hold one every year to maintain the population at a constant level.

If council wants to do something useful, it should concentrate instead on controlling dogs.

"I'm not against dogs, but I'm getting tired of having to watch for dog droppings that are all over the place."

Joseph England, president of the gun club, said he will make his crow-shooting offer at Monday's council meeting.

He said he will recommend to council that if the shoot is allowed, shotguns be used in roosting areas.

OUTREACH is the name of the committee and reaching out is certainly what the members have been doing lately.

In a more than symbolic gesture, people from the Garden City (and Wilkinson Road) United Church have stretched out their arms to welcome foreign students at Pearson College of the Pacific.

And from it all has evolved an unusual program.

One Sunday a month for the next six months, two students from different countries will be guest speakers at the 9:45 a.m. service at Garden City. Each will talk for about 15 minutes on their own country, its economics, politics, lifestyles and religions.

If the Pearson College students had never heard of the Garden City United Church nor had the slightest idea where it is, they can be forgiven. Probably some Victorians haven't either.

"It is," Rev. Ron Johnstone told them, "the smallest church in town — but it's got big ideas."

The big ideas needed whittling down a bit as committee members soon found a heap of students on their hands. For this first-of-its-kind project, the church needed 12 students from 12 countries. At Pearson there are 200 students from 50 nations!

"We sat around a table with the list and in turn suggested a country we'd like to hear about," Rev. Ron explained.

The 12 they came up with are Poland, Greece, Israel, Colombia, Ecuador, Kenya, Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon), Malaysia, Malta, Singapore, Papua New Guinea and Palestine (where the speaker will be a Palestinian refugee).

"Then, after we had chosen the 12, we had to decide which we'd hear from first," the minister added. "As the new Pope had just been elected, we thought it would be a fine idea if we asked the student from Poland to speak on the initial Sunday."

That's tomorrow morning and first up will be attractive Dorota Pietrzyk, who comes from northern Poland and is in her second year at the college.

She'll be accompanied by 16-year-old John Papaioannou of Greece, who said he'll talk mostly about the culture of his country.

I popped out to Pearson the other night with Johnstone and a few of the committee members and the young people were certainly enthusiastic about the idea. Many were disappointed because their countries were not chosen. But the minister said he had a way of getting around that.

"Next year, we should have a speaker from the 50 countries, one a week, and I'll be able to take two weeks' holiday," he quipped. "Wouldn't that be great for a minister, guest speakers each week . . . I could spend all my time curling!"

Many, too, were so interested in the project that, even though they're not directly involved, they plan to go along to church each week to hear the different speakers.

But the most enthusiastic of all were the students who will be doing the actual speaking.

Vivacious little Jacqueline Leong from Singapore came rushing in from the pool, wrapped in a towel and hair dripping, to tell me she's so excited about the idea she plans to wear national costume and talk of the uniqueness of Singapore which lies at the crossroads of the eastern and western worlds.

"In this college there are interesting students from all over the world," she explained. "But, unless someone is willing to listen, you don't often get a chance to talk about your country."

"It is good for us," Palestinian refugee Baher Al-Ashab told me.

"Like me, I have a problem to talk about . . . and I'll tell of Jerusalem and politics; and it will be good to meet people from outside the college."

That was important, agreed Dorota.

THE college, it's a loveable place but there are times when you don't like it," she said. "It's an unbelievably beautiful setting but you live for mail from home, and are very cut off from the community out here.

"This invitation means that people are interested in many countries and in worldwide problems," Dorota felt.

"I was really moved that there are people who care about us and want to know about us."

Nut Munchers Given A Sexy Green Light

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians can continue to munch peanuts without worry of cancer or impairment of their sex drive, says Health Minister Monique Begin.

Begin told the Commons Friday she sees no reason for worry about the safety of peanuts which she said supply vitamin E, an important ingredient in the human sex drive.

She was responding to Saskatchewan MP Lorne Nystrom (NDP-Yorkton-Melville) who said Dr. A. B. Morrison, head of the federal health protection branch, has warned against stale-tasting peanuts because they could contain the organism aflatoxin, which has been linked to cancer in animals.

Begin said federal inspectors examine all shipments of imported nuts. "I'm confident that the inspection system is sufficient to ensure the safety of all Canadians."

Nystrom said a television reporter showed Morrison six packages of peanuts bought in Ottawa and the health official said he would eat only two.

PM HYPOCRITE, SAYS PARROT

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Claude Parrot accused Prime Minister Trudeau Friday of blatant hypocrisy and warned the government is digging its own grave with legislation introduced this week on pensions and unemployment insurance benefits.

The president of the 23,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers said in a strongly-worded statement the government is sadly mistaken if it thinks workers will tolerate destruction of their rights.

"For this government, which is so generous when it comes to subsidies to corporations exporting profits and jobs and which seems to know no limits in respect to increased military spending, to arbitrarily decide to permit the steady erosion of the real value of pensions is unforgiveable," the statement said.

"Likewise, the decapitation of the unemployment insurance will long be remembered as one of the darkest moments in Canadian history."

Parrot was referring to two bills introduced in the Commons this week.

One would put limits on cost-of-living increases in the pensions of former government employees and their survivors. No longer would former employees' pensions be indexed to rise automatically with the cost of living as they do now. Instead, they would be increased on an ad hoc basis.

Another bill introduced this week would toughen eligibility requirements.

Institutional Orphans Get Full Baby Bonus

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will pay more money to the provinces for orphans under proposed family allowance legislation, Welfare Minister Monique Begin said Friday.

However, she told the Commons that the provincial governments and orphanages will not get the increased tax benefits the federal government is providing individual parents.

Miss Begin was replying to questions from Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle Moose Mountain) during debate in the Commons on a bill to decrease monthly family allowance payments to parents to $20.

The current monthly allowance is $25.68. It would have risen to $28.80 Jan. 1 because it is indexed to the rise in the cost of living.

Miss Begin said the provinces will be paid the full, indexed amount, $28.80, for every orphan living in institutions.

For orphans living with grandparents or other relatives, only the guardian with legal custody of the child will get the family allowance payment and it will be the reduced amount $20.

But the guardians, like other parents would get the proposed refundable tax credit.

The credit is $200 per child in families with net annual income of $18,000 or less.

Warren Davis: national broadcaster.

"I started reading seriously when I was about seven years of age and by a process of osmosis found myself working as a page in the Toronto Public Library system when I was about eleven. And that gave me an opportunity not only to read but to find out what was available in a library and I worked there all through the later years of public school and high school. I had a love affair with books when I was in my teens. I loved reading in those years and lived a solitary, really literary life."

"I read about two books a week, as well as a lot of journals, magazines and so on. Whenever I'm not engaged in my profession or when I'm not talking to someone, I read. While travelling, while eating in a restaurant, before going to bed at night, in the morning, every chance I get, I'll be reading."

"Right now I'm reading Lady Chatterly's Lover which is possibly the most misunderstood book around. The public attitude toward Lady Chatterly's Lover is that it is a kind of trashy, sexy novel. And it's really a beautifully written love story by a very moral man, and it tells you a great deal about sexual attitudes, social attitudes and political attitudes of the time. And it's a compellingly interesting book to read."

"I have a super edition on Shakespeare which was "borrowed" from the British Embassy in Yugoslavia by a friend of mine who was a soldier in the German army."

"It's the complete works of Shakespeare that had been given by the British Government to the Yugoslavian Library and he in his capacity as a German soldier stole the copy and gave it to me. Nice book."

"I hang around bookstores quite a bit. I like them. In fact, there was a W.H. Smith store downtown that I browsed around over a period of about 20 to 30 years."

"What I like about bookstores like W.H. Smith is that they don't bug you. If you want help, they provide it, but if you don't, they don't bother you. You can stand there all day and read books, if you want."

"I like to see all the new books in one place...everything that's new readily available for you to see."

You'll find the books you're looking for at any one of the many conveniently located W.H. Smith bookstores throughout the city. All of the books are prominently displayed and easy to find. Come in and turn a few pages. Our friendly staff will be happy to be of help.

Horner Rebuke from PM

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau assured the commons Friday that in future statements on economic policy will be made either by the prime minister or Finance Minister Jean Chretien.

He added that such statements will not be made by Industry Trade and Commerce Minister Jack Horner. It was an implied rebuke.

The declaration followed questions in the house by the opposition concerning Horner's suggestion made Thursday that the Canadian government has no choice but to increase interest rates. Horner told reporters U.S. President Carter's decision Wednesday to raise his country's discount rate by a full percentage point as part of a crash program to stabilize that country's dollar, will force the Bank of Canada to raise its lending rate now at a record 10.25 per cent.

Borner's comments were recorded on tape by reporters Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe) pointed out. He said the minister was not acting in a "responsible fashion" by speculating on future interest rates in this country.

The prime minister said he understood the minister had claimed he was misquoted. Stevens said there was no way he could be misquoted because the comment had been tape recorded.

He said he had listened to the tape and the minister had speculated on future interest rates in Canada and had stated categorically that they will automatically rise with American interest rate increases.

The prime minister said it is the governor of the Bank of Canada, Gerald Bouey, not Trade Minister Horner, who will decide in consultation with the finance minister the interest rate.

Trudeau said if the trade minister had stated that the interest rates would rise with the American interest rate he did not state government policy which has been stated by Finance Minister Jean Chretien.

Trudeau said some ministers had been accused of not being sufficiently communicative and not speaking enough to the press. He suggested if the press would stay away from the cabinet door and not ask ministers any questions then they would not get answers.

Thistles Flourish In Wind and Rain

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

It was the kind of day the players could have traded in their soccer boots for hip waders, making it the kind of day defenders loomed large in the outcome.

So it was as Mt. Douglas Thistles won the Times Trophy for the second year in a row by defeating Vic High Tyees 2-0 in a driving rainstorm Friday to clinch first place in the Greater Victoria high school soccer league.

The result left Mt. Doug with 23 points on 11 wins, one loss and a tie. Vic High finished with nine wins, two losses and two ties for 20 points.

That means Mt. Doug has home-field advantage next Tuesday against fourth-place Reynolds Roadrunners in one of two First Division sudden-death semi-finals. Vic High hosts third-place Spectrum in the other, also Tuesday, with the winners meeting in the final next Friday night at 8 at Royal Athletic Park.

Victory also gives Thistles a berth in the B.C. high school soccer championship tournament, Nov. 16-18 in Nanaimo. The other spot alloted to Victoria goes to the Division I playoff winner. If that happens to be Mt. Doug, the other playoff finalist will make the trip.

In the only other first division contest Friday, Spectrum beat fifth-place Oak Bay 3-1 on goals by Brent Gelaude, Ron Kopan and Lee Pollock.

A wind-whipped rain was the major factor in the game at Mt. Doug although the Thistles held a decided territorial advantage, especially after half time. That's where the defence came into play.

Mt. Doug could have had at least two more goals despite a sloppy field but was thwarted by the goalkeeping of Tyees' Rob Kay and a defence anchored by Paul Pynn, who was a standout.

The two Thistle goals — by striker Dennis Mamic in the second minute on a pinpoint pass from Rob Wallace, and by Wallace with four minutes remaining on a slithering, deflected shot — were only the second and third in 13 games this season against Kaye.

Overlooked much of the season was Thistles' defence, which yielded only four goals, one more than Vic High. Mt. Doug goalkeeper Doug White, 16, who has been scored on in only three games this year, Friday credited the players in front of him for his success.

"I hardly ever get any shots," White said. "I might get one a game (he handled a couple of hard ones Friday). It's the defence. They just play great."

Despite their one-two finish in the standings, Mt. Doug and Vic High can hardly be cast in the role of favorites in Tuesday's semi-finals. Reynolds is the only team to beat Mt. Doug this year, posting a decision last month at Reynolds. Thistles won the return game 2-1.

Similarly, Spectrum is the only team other than Mt. Doug with a win over Vic High. Tyees had their shutout and unbeaten strings snapped Oct. 27 via a 1-0 loss to Spectrum. Earlier, the teams played to a scoreless saw-off.

If Mt. Doug and Vic High get through to next Friday's final, it will mark a repeat of last year's pairing when the Tyees knocked off the Thistles 1-0. Mt. Doug, ironically, has never won the playoffs.

In the second division, one playoff berth is still undecided. Claremont tackles second-place Belmont Braves in one of Tuesday's semi-finals, but the foe for the front-running Parkland Panthers won't be known until Monday, following a sudden-death contest between Stelly's Stingers and Esquimalt Dockers.

Stelly's trimmed Claremont 5-1 Friday to gain a fourth-place tie with Esquimalt, a 4-1 loser to Parkland.

Free Agent Buyers Ignore Aging Tiant

LUIS TIANT
. . . time catching up

NEW YORK (AP) — His birth date—that eternal enemy of every athlete — apparently has caught up with Luis Tiant, the veteran pitcher who defied his age for more years than he will admit.

Tiant was among the 42 players in baseball's re-entry draft and wound up on the sidelines—one of 14 players selected by one or fewer clubs and therefore totally free to negotiate with any of the 26 teams.

Tiant was 13-8 for Boston last season with a 3.31 earned run average, figures that ordinarily would be considered respectable. The problem, however, is the pitcher's age. There will be 38 candles on the cake when Tiant celebrates his birthday Nov. 23. And there are some people who'll tell you there ought to be a few more than that.

So, when the free agent talent was divided up Friday, Tiant was all but ignored. New York Yankees put in the lone claim on his negotiating rights and because only one team expressed any interest in him, the pitcher was declared a free agent, available to all 26 clubs.

Five players, pitchers Larry Gura, Tommy John, Elias Sosa and Jim Slaton, and infielder-outfielder Lee Lacy, were picked by the maximum 13 clubs in the draft, which was populated by a host of senior citizens. Only 12 clubs went after Cincinnati's Pete Rose and the less-than-unanimous interest in the Reds' third baseman was the surprise of the draft.

Vikettes Gain Final Of Calgary Tourney

University of Victoria basketball clubs apparently were enjoying life on the road Friday as the Vikettes chalked up a triumph in a women's invitational tournament at Calgary and the Vikings rolled to an exhibition victory at Winnipeg.

Jane Favali scored 34 points as the Vikettes trimmed University of Saskatchewan Huskiettes 68-47 in championship play at the University of Calgary tournament. Michelle Belanger added 18 points for UVic.

Victoria will play Calgary Dinnies, who edged Lethbridge Pronghorns 56-55, in the final tonight. Donna Hanna, with 20 points, was Lethbridge's top scorer while Holly Jackson and Jenis Paskevich had 15 and 12 points for Calgary.

In consolation play, Yvonne Goodwin scored 19 points to lead Simon Fraser University Clanswomen to a 67-55 victory over University of Regina Cougettes and Alberta Pandas routed Mount Royal College Cougars 87-28.

Freshman Kelly Dukeshire was the big gun for the Vikings in the men's exhibition battle against University of Winnipeg, hitting 75 per cent of his shots from the floor and counting 23 points to spearhead an 84-72 triumph over Winnipeg, rated No. 1 in the Great Plains Conference.

"It was our best game of the year, no question," said Uvic coach Ken Shields after the Vikings had overcome an eight-point deficit in the opening half and coasted home following a second-half surge that produced a 22-point lead at one time.

Robbie Parris, a fifth-year guard, notched 18 points for the Vikings and clubmates Reni Dolcetti and Ian Hyde-Lay added 13 and 10.

VIKINGS (84) — Kelly Dukeshire 23, Robbie Parris 18, Reni Dolcetti 13, Gerald Kazanowski 8, Chris Hebb 8, Mickey Welder 6, Ian Hyde-Lay 4, Ted Anderson 4; WINNIPEG (72) — Ken Opalko 27, Dan Kinaschuk 15, Bob Magel 14, Ron Jackson 6, Brian Twomey 4, Delaineh Deguefe 4, Ron Hutsal 2.

Skillings, Vinthers, Sparkes Bow

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Bernie Sparkes, Steve Skillings and defending champion Roy Vinthers all suffered losses Friday in the first day of the $25,000 Kamloops cash bonspiel.

The major surprise came when Don Bogie from Kamloops crushed Vinthers, of Surrey, 9-3.

Skillings, of Victoria, missed a wide-open takeout on his last rock to drop a 9-8 decision to Tony Eberts of Kamloops and Jake Block of Abbotsford stole one in an extra end to defeat Sparkes 7-6.

Frank Morisette of Calgary stopped Terry Owen of Ruskin 7-5, Dr. Ken Neumann of Vancouver defeated Glen Hillson of Vancouver 8-7, Bert Gretzinger of Kelowna downed Brad Clarke of Victoria 5-4 and Trev Fisher of Coquitlam dropped Ivan Carlisle of Port Alberni 7-4.

Newest Oilers Pay Off Quickly

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers sported three new—and very expensive—faces Friday and it was only fitting that one of the high-priced newcomers should score the winning goal.

Peter Driscoll, one-third of the $800,000 package Oilers owner Peter Pocklington acquired Thursday from Indianapolis Racers, rifled home a rebound at 6:02 of overtime to give Edmonton a 4-3 victory over Winnipeg Jets in a World Hockey Association contest.

A crowd of 11,762, Edmonton's largest of the season, turned up in hopes of seeing the new talent snap the Oilers out of a skid which had seen the club lose its last four games—all at home.

Wayne Gretsky, who—along with goaltender Ed Mio—accompanied Driscoll to Edmonton, also scored. The 17-year-old, who signed a $1.7 million personal services contract with Racers owner Nelson Skalbania after last season, blasted a 50-foot shot past Jets goaltender Marcus Mattson 14 seconds into the second period.

Mio also made his first appearance with the Oilers, but had to leave the game at 11:45 of the second period with a wrenched knee and the Oilers leading 3-1.

Elsewhere Friday, Quebec Nordiques edged Birmingham Bulls 3-2, while England Whalers dumped Indianapolis 6-3. (Standings, summaries on page 21).

Vikings Lose Long Struggle

University of Victoria Vikings breezed to an easy triumph and suffered a tough defeat Friday in opening round-robin matches at their annual fall men's volleyball tournament.

After waltzing to a 15-0, 15-1 decision over the B.C. Olympics Juniors of Vancouver, the Vikings found that the Vancouver Volleyball Club was considerably more talented and finished a marathon struggle on the wrong end of an 18-16, 13-15, 17-5 score.

Simon Fraser University, also competing in "A" pool of the eight-team event at UVic, downed the Olympics Juniors 15-9, 15-10.

The Far West Hammers of Victoria gave the B.C provincial squad almost more than it could handle in "B" pool round-robin action, losing a 13-15, 15-12, 15-8 struggle against the provincials, who also downed University of B.C. Thunderbirds. The Birds also lost to B.C. Olympics of Vancouver.

Flames Unbeaten in 12; Test Canadiens Tonight

By The Canadian Press

Goaltender Dan Bouchard hasn't lost a game this season, so it's natural that his thoughts should turn toward perfection.

"I kind of like two shutouts in a row," Bouchard said Friday night after turning aside 25 Pittsburgh Penguins shots for his second consecutive shutout in a 2-0 National Hockey League victory for the amazing Atlanta Flames, who ran their unbeaten string to 12 games. "It sure would be nice to get one tomorrow night."

Bouchard blanked Philadelphia Flyers 3-0 on Wednesday, but three in a row will be a tough challenge. Atlanta travels to Montreal tonight to face the defending Stanley Cup champion Canadiens.

Atlanta opened the season with two ties and now has won 10 in a row, and Flames coach Fred Creighton is not about to tinker with perfection. He has promised to stick with Bouchard until he loses.

At Vancouver, the Leafs got some acrobatic netminding from Paul Harrison and second-period goals by Dave Williams and Lanny McDonald to down the Canucks.

Harrison was outstanding in the opening period, blocking 17 Canucks shots, while Williams and McDonald scored to break a 1-1 deadlock in the second.

Shupe In No Hurry To Take a Chance

Geordie Robertson is just about ready but Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe, as much as he would welcome the services of his high-scoring centreman, is in no rush.

Robertson, a 55-goal gunner for the Cougars last season, has been sidelined for three weeks with a knee injury. He resumed skating this week and Shupe said Friday there is "an outside chance" Robertson may rejoin the Cougars for a weekend Western Hockey League series with Seattle Breakers.

The teams meet tonight in Memorial Arena (8:30) and hit Seattle for a rematch on Sunday.

Only one point separates all four teams in the Western Division.

"We need all the points we can get this weekend," said Shupe, "but I can't take chances rushing Geordie back."

A skate today will determine if Robertson will dress tonight.

Shupe also said a Dec. 19 exhibition against Moscow Selects at Memorial Arena has been confirmed but the date may force Victoria to play the Russians without help.

Cougars had planned to bolster their lineup with players from Seattle, New Westminster and Portland Winter Hawks. However, the Breakers and Portland are due to play in Seattle on the same night and New Westminster is scheduled to leave that day for Sweden and the world junior tournament.

"I think we could do all right without additions," said Shupe, "but the fans might like to see a strengthened team play the Selects. The only alternative, at the moment, is to try and switch the date."

Selects play in Seattle Dec. 17 and in Vancouver the following day.

The Breakers, sparked by Len Dies' two-goal effort, came up sharp Friday to defeat New Westminster 5-2 and move into a three-way tie for second, one point behind Victoria.

It was the Bruins' third straight defeat on the road.

In other games Friday, Brandon Wheat Kings ran their undefeated streak to 15 by defeating Edmonton Oil Kings 3-1, Billings Bighorns blanked the Medicine Hat Tigers 6-0, Lethbridge broke a four-game skid by defeating Calgary Wranglers 6-3 and Saskatoon Blades belted the hapless Regina Pats 11-2.

Two Rowing Medals For Canada

LAKE KARAPIRO, N.Z. (CP) — Canada won two medals, a silver and a bronze, at the world rowing championships today.

The Canadians finished second in the women's coxless pairs and then claimed a second medal when the Canadian women's eight won the bronze medal for the second year in a row.

Betty Craig, of Brockville, Ont., and Susan Antoft, of Halifax, finished the 1,000 metre course in 4.02.87 to East Germany's 4.02.65. Holland was third in 4.05.38.

The Canadian eight finished in 3.28.34, almost overtaking East Germany over the last 200 metres, for the silver medal. The Soviet Union dislodged the East Germans from their usual finishing position by taking the gold with a winning time of 3.22.00.

In the coxless pairs, Canada put on a tremendous burst of speed over the last 150 metres in the final and only failed to overtake gold medallist East Germany by a few centimetres.

With 150 metres left to row, Canada was even with Holland and Bulgaria and one full boat length behind the East Germans, who have won the event at every championships since 1964.

Antoft had planned to retire after this year's championships but she now vows to return with Craig ald race for the gold next year.

In other races today, Canada's women's coxed four placed fifth in the final, in 3.57.06. East Germany was once again first in 3.48.47.

Ina DeLure and Katie Burke of Victoria were on the coxed four.

In the coxless four, Canada was ninth, losing the small final by more than fifteen seconds to Great Britain, who were seventh. Bulgaria won the gold medal.

Earlier today, the Canadian crew of Tim Britton-Foster of Toronto and 16-year-old Tim Storm of St. Catharines, Ont., was eliminated from the championship finals of the men's coxless pairs and relegated to the petit final.

Their time today of 7:49.16 was more than 40 seconds slower than in Thursday repechage when they finished second to Ireland by less than a boat length.

Legion Spree Adds to Woes

Things are not getting any easier for Lake Cowichan Bairds in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Although still ahead of the winless Kerry Park Islanders, the have yielded 99 goals and lost eight times in 10 outings. Sixteen of those goals and the eighth defeat arrived Friday night at Esquimalt Sorts Centre as Esquimalt Legion Blues continued to make life miserable for the Cowichan crew by)kating to a 16-4 victory.

Moving into sole possession of second place with the win, the Blues drilled more than 60 shots at Lake Cowichan netminder John Marsh and collected four goals from Terry Parsons, three from Wayne Proceviat, two each from Ron Brooks, Bruce Jeffries and Kelly Bryant, plus single counters from Russ Kennedy and Mark Eckstrom as they moved two points ahead of Fuller Lake Flyers.

Glen Smith, with two goals, Barry Toporowski and Ron Hughes scored for the Blues, who had 24 shots stopped by the Esquimalt goaltending duo of Rick Barry and Gord Braibye.

British Squad Remains In Tie

Times News Services

Tracy Austin won one and lost one Friday as the women's tennis teams of the United States and Britain tied at two matches all in the Wightman Cup competition in London.

The 15-year-old Austin won the first set but failed to maintain the pace in her singles duel with Virginia Wade, the 1977 Wimbledon champion. The British captain won 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Tracy then partnered Billie Jean King in a 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 doubles win over Sue Mappin and Anne Hobbs before a crowd of nearly 7,000 in London's Royal Albert Hall.

The series was wide open as the two teams headed for the final three matches—two singles and a doubles today.

Britain has won the cup only nine times against the United States' 40 times, and is trying to avenge a 7-0 whitewash in last year's match in Oakland.

Wilkinson, for One, Didn't Mind the Rain at Sandown

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

The rains came to Sandown on Friday—as they did to most places in southern B.C.—and only the hard rocks turned up and survived as the thoroughbreds splashed their way around the oval.

The crowd, surprisingly enough, was "1,394 brave souls" as director of racing Aubrey Davies referred to them, and the mutuel handle was $122,095, smallest of the three Fridays at the meeting so far, but nonetheless respectable in view of the weather.

And in regard to this year's mutuel play, which is down from other years, Davies says it was more or less known right at the start of the meeting that the totals would be down.

"You can always tell about Sandown in the first three days," Davies said, "whether we start on a Wednesday, Friday or whatever. The pattern is set then and it holds. This year were down at the start and it's been that way ever since, even in the good weather we enjoyed earlier."

Davies attributes some of the drop to the harness meeting having been here all summer, "you can't put $4 million through the mutuels and not notice it," he said. Otherwise he feels "the money just isn't here this year."

But there is no cause for alarm. The horses are here and, although there have been some short fields, perhaps there is a better overall class of thoroughbred than ever before. The races have been competitive, which is what the sport is all about, and the fans "especially those who showed up today, have been just great."

As to be expected, results were varied in the slop that marked the track. Only two of the public picks got down in front while a couple of overlays added spice to the program for those fortunate enough to recognize the situation.

And also, there is a brand new race for jockey honors. Apprentice Travis Wilkinson had three winners and now is tied with Mark Walker, who was blanked, for the lead. Each has 16. Meanwhile, Ray Creighton and Randy Dailey each contributed a pair.

The solid ones, were real solid. Zip Note, ridden by Ray Creighton, won the fifth by eight lengths and paid off at $3.80, while Polatouche went off at 50 cents on the dollar in the sixth to return $3.00.

And the overlays were healthy enough. The eight-year old bay mare Silk Song was let get away at about 9-1 and barely made it as she came through on the rail under a heady ride by Randy Dailey to win the third and pay $19.60. Then in the feature, Sassie Driver, who had just gotten through beating the same kind earlier, overtook the pace-setting Nib Bill to win by a neck from the fast-closing Triple Two and return $12.60. Sassie Driver had Robert Stein in the saddle.

Wilkinson got his wins on Strong Muscles ($9.30)in the second, Naughty Nyte ($9.60) in the fourth and Polatouche. Creighton was up on Zip Note and It's Impossible ($9.80) in the eighth. Dailey scored his first on La Belle Michelle ($11.60) in the first and Silk Song.

Any hopes of Sandown getting earlier dates next year, were dashed, as they figured to be, with the announcement Friday that Exhibition Park would have 108 days of racing next year, beginning April 9 and ending Oct. 13 . . . At Cloverdale, the standardbreds will have 113 days in the 1979/80 season, beginning Oct. 15 and ending in April. The current Cloverdale meeting goes to a five-day format next week . . . An oddity in the mutuels occurred in the fourth race when Major Return, which finished second, returned $5.70 for the place and $7.90 for the show.

Birdie Binge in the Wind

Times News Services

Phil Hancock and Keith Fergus mastered swirling winds for another nine-under-par 63 to take a three-stroke lead after the second round of the Disney World National Team golf tournament Friday at Lake Buena Vista, Fla.

Hancock, a former University of Florida star in his second year on the pro circuit, dumped in five birdies and Fergus birdied all four par fives en route to a 36-hole total score of 126 in the best-ball PGA event.

Brothers Lanny and Bobby Wadkins were tied with the team of Wayne Levi and Bob Mann for second place at 15-under 129.

Dave Barr of Kelowna and his partner, Ed Fiori, who were just two strokes behind the leaders with a 64 Thursday, blew themselves out of contention with a 70 Friday. Their 36-hole score of 134 was eight shots back of the leaders.

Best round of the day belonged to Forrest (Fuzzy) Fezler and Larry Ziegler, who sank seven birds, one eagle, one double eagle and one bogey for a 61. This put them among the four teams tied for third.

The field was cut to the low 58 teams — shooting 136 and under — for the final two rounds.

Bays and Specs Gain Semi-Finals

NORTH VANCOUVER — It was Victoria against the Mainland today in the semi-final round of the provincial high school girls' field hockey championship tournament as Mount Douglas, hoping for a taste of revenge, went against Kelowna and Oak Bay met Burnaby South.

The Mount Douglas girls, who lost to Kelowna in last year's championship game, reached the semis Friday with a 3-1 conquest of Windermere while the Bays were keeping pace with a 4-3 decision over Spectrum, another Victoria school.

Spectrum, which had topped its division in round-robin play, was deadlocked with Oak Bay at the end of regulation time, but the Bays earned the victory on Heather Benson's penalty corner.

Benson had earlier notched two tallies and clubmate Cathy Cavin had counted once. Trish Sherring fired all three goals for the Specs, who had previously blasted Castlegar 5-0 on four scoring shots by Sherring and one by Julie Patterson.

Mount Douglas, a division leader by ending round-robin chores with a 2-1 win over Chilliwack on goals by Nancy Charlton and Jennifer Little, charged through the quarter-finals as tallies by Janine Prince, Andrie Levy and Charlton produced the triumph over Windermere.

UBC Girls Unbeaten

TORONTO (CP) — University of British Columbia is the only team with three victories after three rounds of the Canadian Iteruniversity Athletic Union women's field hockey championships.

UBC scored two victories in round-robin play Friday and leads the six-team tournament with six points, one ahead of defending champion University of Toronto.

Manitoba is in third place with four points, one point better than New Brunswick. McGill and York universities are pointless.

Reardon Captures Snooker Tournament

LONDON (Reuter) — World professional snooker champion Ray Reardon of Britain won $4,000 first prize in the Champion of Champions tournament Friday, beating Alex Higgins of Northern Ireland 11-9 in the final.

POOR DEVELOPMENT LOSES MANY A GAME

BOBBY'S CLONE

"The kid is almost a cloned Bobby Fischer", said New York grandmaster Arthur Bisguier, looking admiringly at the thin 15-year-old from Diamond Bar, California.

The object of Bisguier's admiration at the U.S. Open in Phoenix was Douglas Root, a quiet, spunky, unassuming lad, easily identifiable by his T-shirt, his big sun visor and his startlingly fine play. Before the Open started, he was said to have "very good potential". By the time it ended, he was the tournament's sensation.

"CHESS AND THE HUMANITIES"

Eighteen states and one foreign country, Australia, were represented at the first "Chess and Humanities" conference, which took place in Lincoln, Nebraska, over the Memorial Day week-end. The event was sponsored by the University of Nebraska, the Lincoln Chess Foundation and the National Endowment for Humanities.

Many new ideas on the merits of chess and the development of the game were explored and presented. But the conference was not without its light moments. The event ended with an invitational tournament for organizers of chess tournaments. It was jointly won by Grandmaster William Martz of Milwaukee and Nebraska champion and U.S. Master Loren Schmidt — and a bear!

The bear was black and struck terror into the hearts of no one present, it being of the teddy species. It sat on Loren's lap while he was playing, and apparently gave him either confidence or good advice, or both. As director of the event, I could find nothing in the FIDE rules about bears sitting in players' laps, and so let it pass.

Package Tours Offer New Destinations

China Opens More Doors for Increased Traffic

By FRENA BLOOMFIELD

HONG KONG - "Let's go to China for the holidays!" This is now very far from being a ridiculous suggestion. This year has seen a blossoming of package tourism in China and the future looks even brighter. Fourteen new destinations are being made available next year. Among these will be two in Szechwan, one in Yunnan and even one in Inner Mongolia. These will be in addition to the present tours which include a standard four-day trip to Canton, a 10-day trip to Canton, Kweilin and Nanning, and a seven-day trip to Peking.

ALTHOUGH some of this expansion is undoubtedly due to the new climate in China, it is largely the culmination of planning begun back in 1975. The Chinese were already moving away from their traditional isolationism by then and were becoming interested in tourism, both for its potential as a money-earner and also through their desire to show what was being achieved in modern China.

However, the Chinese have been fully aware that tourists can only be brought in when facilities are good enough to house and feed them according to their normal expectation and it is this factor which will dictate the pace of the advance in tourism.

BY NOVEMBER 1977, the Chinese were ready to appoint 10 agents in Hong Kong who would bring in a tour group of 150 to Canton every Saturday, plus a group of 50 every second Sunday to Canton and Kweilin.

◆

China is opening up more and more of its territory to the tourists. Next year 14 new destinations are being made available for package tours. A new international terminal is being built at Peking Airport to handle visitors and new guide books, maps and souvenirs are being prepared.

◆

This has now increased and 200 tourists a week are going from Hong Kong to Canton, while the Kweilin group remains the same.

Tourists coming from Europe have to enter China via Japan, mainly to ensure free-flowing access by not overusing Hong Kong's entry point, the Shumchun Railway Station on the Hong Kong-China border, with connecting flights from Canton's Pai Yun Airport.

THE PRICES of tours from Hong Kong are very reasonable in world travel terms. The four-day tour to Canton costs HK$950, which includes all meals, rooms, fares and sightseeing costs.

The 10-day tour costs HK$2,200 and the seven-day Peking tour HK$4,500, which includes airflights. Next year's 16-day tour to the new destinations will probably cost around HK$3,800.

The People's Daily of Peking has just issued figures for tourism in the first six months of this year. They show that of 300,000 tourists 250,000 were Chinese mainly from Hong Kong, Macau and Taiwan.

THE ONLY nationalities banned from entering the country as tourists are Israelis, South Africans, Rhodesians and South Koreans.

An increasing number of special tours are also going into China. Some of these are put together by groups with particular interests, such as teachers, surgeons and artists, while others come at the invitation of the Chinese government.

A TYPICAL group of this kind is the Hong Kong Art Centre's special group of 15 people associated with all kinds of art and cultural promotion in Hong Kong.

This group will spend two weeks seeing operas, dramas, musical performances and talking extensively with artists in China. Although it is not a promotional tour, general manager Neil Duncan sees it as the start of communications between Chinese artists and the outside world, with a possible future development in bringing China's performers to the eyes of other countries.

THE CHINESE are developing the necessary resources for coping with tourists as fast as they can. A new international terminal is being constructed at Peking Airport and new guide books, maps and souvenirs are being produced.

Hotel building is going on in all the newly-planned destinations and close attention is being paid to standards. Most of those who have been in China comment on the friendliness of people in general and the high standard of the people trained as tourist guides.

"OUR GUIDE spoke excellent Spanish," said one group returning from a Peking, Shanghai and Canton tour. "He had never been out of China, but he had obviously been very well-taught at Peking University. He was also cultured and quite at ease with us and aware of what we wanted to know."

"Long after the mystery of China has evaporated," said Swire Travel's managing director Denis Shea, "people will want to go there for its scenic beauty, its sense of history and to see what its government is doing."

ADD TO that the willingness of the Chinese themselves to learn about the world and to communicate with their guests, again commented on by many returning tourists, and it is obvious that China must become one of the world's major tourist destinations, once its facilities expand to meet demands.

South Africa Offers New Safaris

JOHANNESBURG — Three new safaris for tourists are being offered in South Africa.

Gametrackers is the latest organization to operate in the private Timbavati Game Reserve on the eastern border of Kruger National Park. It has been operating in Botswana for six years and turned its attention to Timbavati, home of the white lions, when the Botswana bookings reached saturation.

The organization has leased 6,000 hectares (about 15,000 acres) in the middle of the reserve and has taken over the Tanda Tula rest camp as a base. Rates run from R150 (about $200 Canadian at current exchange rates) for a one-day "businessman's express" to R435 ($585) for five days. Full details may be obtained from African Travel Supervisors, 105 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill. 60603.

Once Branded As a Symbol . . . . . . of Degenerate Capitalism

State-controlled Roulette Now Allowed in Poland

By KARL CWINAROWICZ

WARSAW (Reuter) — Gambling, like many other enterprises, is state-owned in Poland, but like very few other businesses it is highly profitable.

The gambling industry in Poland has been growing rapidly in recent years and people are encouraged openly to try their luck.

Private gambling is illegal in Poland but clandestine bookmakers operate in force and the betting fraternity seems to prefer them to the official Totalisator on horse racing.

Racing is the least profitable both for the state and the gamblers and the most suspect. The season lasts eight months with two meets a week in Warsaw and Wroclaw. Attendances range from 10,000 to 60,000.

TREASURY GETS CUT

The 1976 statistics said total income of the race course was $35,000. But a recent news report said the turnover on the race course in Warsaw alone was expected to reach $50,000, of which 15 per cent would go to the course and 10 per cent to the treasury.

Seventy-five per cent goes to the betting public. "But how much money will go into the private bookmakers' pockets, nobody can tell," the illustrated weekly Panorama said.

It quoted the director of the Warsaw race course as admitting that the course had a bad reputation in the 1960s, with trainers and jockeys co-operating with bookmakers.

He hoped the situation had improved since then, but conceded that bookmakers still were operating and jockeys were "still playing tricks" in races.

A Warsaw newspaper recently listed the names of jockeys punished "for keeping the horses too tight in the reins"—holding back.

Panorama said the history of the Warsaw course included cases of embezzlement, poisoning horses and the drowning of a jockey in a sack.

DRAWS TELEVISED

There are two other main gambling enterprises in Poland—the state lottery and the sport Totalisator. The latter attracts the highest annual income of $140 million and profits of $46 million.

Each week millions of hopefuls buy tickets and watch the televised draw. News reports of a recent draw said the winning ticket paid $35,750, a sum too small to buy a decent apartment or a good Western car.

It is not known exactly how much gambling money the treasury takes, but experts say it is substantial.

With the state lottery, which brings in nearly $50 million a year and makes $10 million profit, a ticket costs $5.

There are two draws a month, with the highest win in the first $12,500 and in the second $50,000.

ROULETTE IS IN

Earlier this year, the Baltic coast daily Czas reported preparations in Swindujscie for opening state-controlled roulette gambling for the first time in Poland.

Roulette previously had been banned and branded officially as a symbol of degenerate capitalism, the newspaper said.

A manager of the Polish ferry transport on the Baltic Sea persuaded authorities to instal a roulette wheel on board a ferry to Sweden, Czas reported.

The newspaper said the manager told authorities that roulette would provide a steady flow of much-sought Western currency, because this would be the only money allowed for gambling.

The state lottery has been authorized to purchase the roulette equipment and know-how from Sweden and provided training for 27 Polish croupiers.

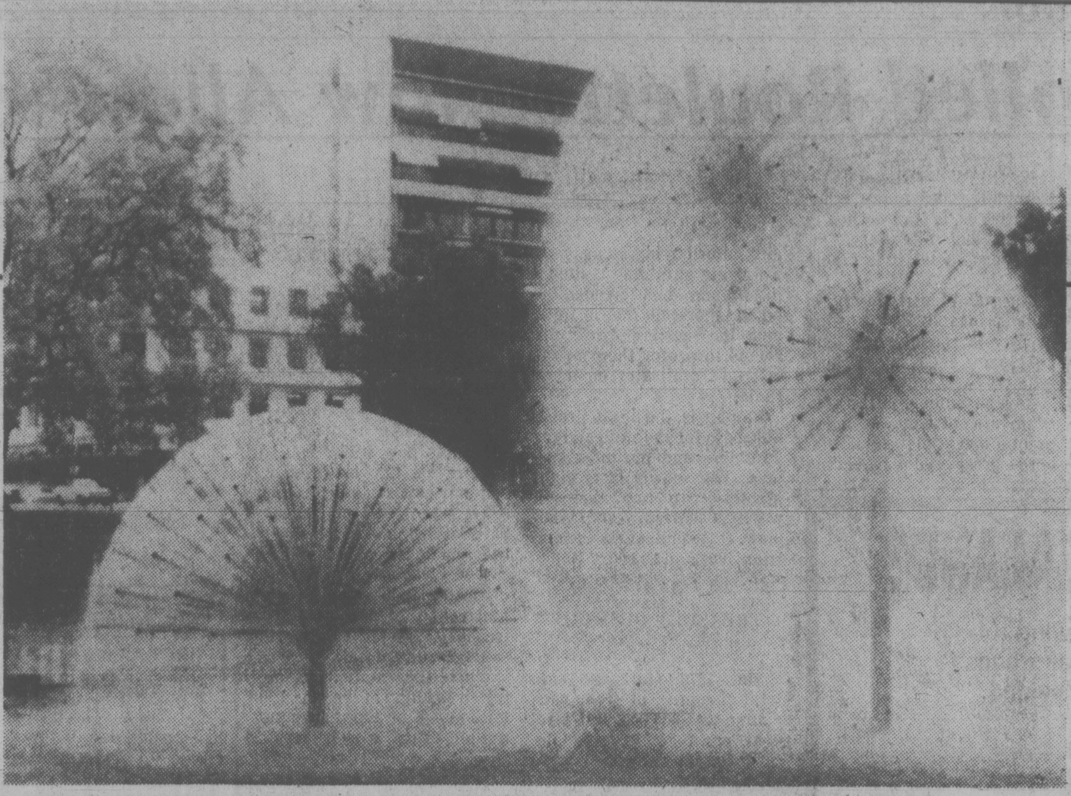
Frank Approach in Christchurch



Sphere-shaped fountains splash in reflecting pool beside Avon River at site of Christchurch's town hall and cultural complex, rated one of best in the world. The city, New Zealand's second largest, abounds with English-style flower gardens and parks.

It's 'More Trad than Mod' Behind the Tweed Curtain

By EVELYN OLDHAM

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. — A welcome sign to any traveller in these inflated times is in the arrivals section of Christchurch airport:

Welcome to Christchurch
Tipping: A way of life in some countries
Is not the custom in New Zealand

Its unusual name doesn't seem so surprising considering that the Church of England cathedral is its landmark and Cathedral Square is like a traffic circle with main streets branching out from it.

BUT THE CITY actually isn't named after the impressive big basalt cathedral; the name comes from Christchurch on the River Avon in England. So naturally, the willow-draped river that wanders slowly through the city is the Avon.

Christchurch is young. The colony was started in 1840 under sponsorship of the Church of England and the ambitious settlers began building the cathedral in the wilderness 10 years later. Today, Christchurch, growing quickly, is the second largest city in New Zealand with more than 300,000 people.

IT HAS THE tradition of being the most English city in the Pacific and, with its flowery plots of land, seems to live up to its reputation.

However, among the English daisies and roses grow native lilies and daisies and, in the Botanic Gardens, native trees and plants alongside exotic imports from abroad.

A GUIDE REPORTS that Christchurch hasn't forgotten its Church of England upbringing. Books such as The Joy of Sex are banned. But a tourist bulletin in the hotel room devotes a page to advertising escort and massage services: "Relax in Victorian atmosphere—sauna—massage;" "Japanese massage a specialty—we come to you;" "Sweet girls for a relaxing massage."

The town of Funchal on Madeira is popular with tourists although it has only one sandy beach, Most of the hotels feature salt water-filled swimming pools and spectacular views.

Quaint New Plymouth Turns Back on Progress

NEW PLYMOUTH, Bahamas — It's your basic New England fishing village: neat little clapboard homes with gingerbread trim, white picket fences and narrow streets.

But there is something a bit different about New Plymouth, an island in the Bahamas 240 kilometres due east of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

There's a reason, however, why this industrious little village has a a familiar American look. It was settled 200 years ago by Loyalists who fled the United States rather than give up their allegiance to the King of England.

Today, New Plymouth's residents make money by fishing (500,000 pounds of lobster tails were exported last year alone) or from tourism.

There is no unemployment ofn the island. Nor is there poverty or crime to speak of (no one can remember when the old jail was last used to house prisoners; it is currently a schoolbook depository).

New Plymouth is a place for a visitor to come and relax. There is no nightlife and only three small restaurants and two bars for its 350 residents and tourists.

Visitors will also not be bothered by radio, television or telephones — there are few of them.

Getting to town is an experience. The plane (Mackey Airlines out of Miami, Fort Lauderdale or West Palm Beach) lands on nearby Treasure Cay, then a ferry brings you here.

Boating, swimming and fishing are prime leisure-time activities. But most visitors come to relax and stroll through New Plymouth's narrow streets.

Walking Parliament, the village's main street, is fun (it only takes 10 minutes) and it is usually quiet, disturbed only by an occasional passer-by or a few chickens clucking as they scratch for something to eat.

This all changes when the mail boat arrives from Nassau or when a small freighter comes in with supplies. Those are big events and everyone turns out for them.

Practically all the homes on Parliament Street have porches. They usually are occupied every evening because the old tradition of calling on neighbors is still maintained.

It is then that you can meet some of the residents who are predominantly of Scottish ancestry.

Because of intermarriage, everyone seems to be named Lowe, Curry, Saunders or Roberts — and yes, they are friendly.

New Plymouth may be small, but it is not without its heritage. The Lowe Museum is located in a 150-year-old house and it contains prints, artifacts, photographs and an impressive group of model ships built by Albert Lowe who is the titular leader of the village. His son, Alton, a well-known artist, restored the house and opened the museum last year.

Accommodations in the area are limited but excellent with three hotels. The New Plymouth Club and Inn in the centre of the village; the Bluff House which rests on a 100-foot hill is a few minutes away by boat and is the Green Turtle Club.

GOLF, A SET OF TENNIS, AND A TAN BY NEW YEAR'S.

(SURE BEATS SHOVELING SNOW.)

Imagine your family going for a swim before opening presents on Christmas morning, giving their tennis rackets a workout that afternoon, or enjoying football at its best by going to the Fiesta Bowl.

Instead of the typical New Year's party (whose house this year?), imagine riding some horses to the foothills, building a fire and popping the corks.

Imagine all this and more making your holidays in the Phoenix-Scottsdale area a time your family will never forget. Fine restaurants abound and accommodations range from lavish, major resorts to moderately priced hotels and motels, offering luxury and economy packages.

Start making plans to celebrate the holidays with a tan. See your travel agent, call for reservations, or write to:

Palm Beach, Truly a Rich Man's Mecca

ON THE GO With Jerry Hulse

At least one millionaire has a ticker tape installed in his bedroom. All he need do to learn how the market is doing is to roll over and check the latest Dow report.

NO, THE locals aren't exaggerating when they say this is a rich man's mecca. Can you name another town in the nation where the banks send limousines to pick up their customers?

Pardon me, depositors.

As my plane touched down the other day, the pilot on National announced over the P.A., "Well, here we are in the land of money."

All I can say is, if this is how it feels to be rich, it feels very good indeed.

Unfortunately, a few of the winter regulars had a turn of bad luck lately. Poor dears. Probably something to do with all that Arab oil business.

Well, the others are more fortunate. They've still got their big British machines. It's a fact, there are more Rolls-Royces in Palm Beach than anywhere else on earth.

Yes, darlings, London included.

The winter crowd is generous, though. I was talking to a saleslady at F.A.O. Schwartz. That's the big children's toy store on Worth Ave. She was breathless. She'd just hurried back fom a mansion down on the waterfront.

"THE LADY who lives there was having her hair done," she said, "and the beautician said something about it being her child's birthday and so she rang us up immediately.

"'I must have a doll,' she insisted. 'Right away, darling, right away.' It was the fastest $79 sale I ever made!"

To prove how this is no ordinary town, I called for a cab and a limousine pulled up to the hotel. I could not help wondering who it was for.

I TURNED to him. "Are you talking to me?"

"I'm asking, did you call a taxi?"

"This is a cab?"

He sighed. "What does it look like, a hearse?"

Indeed, it was a cab. In Palm Beach, he told me, only Cadillacs are licensed to do business. If a Ford or one of those other ordinary machines arrives with a passenger from one of those nasty suburbs across the lake, it must leave Palm Beach empty.

That's the law.

MY DRIVER was Joe Lydon. "I call this fantasy land," he said. "My longest fare ever was to New York. You know what it cost the guy? Fifteen hunnert bucks!"

"He went up to where his old man lived to get some more money," he said. "We was gone 11 days." He whistled. "This guy drank three cases of Scotch. I'm not exaggeratin'. Hadda stop every couple of hours for another sack of ice."

DURING THE high season visitors brush past princes and princesses, duchesses and dukes as they prominade down Worth Ave. It's one of the world's celebrated shopping boulevards.

PRICES are outrageous. Negligees carry $1,000 price tags. One shop, Aubon Gout, keeps the front door locked. Only members are permitted inside. Wine and cheese are served to this select group.

It isn't that host Edgar and Ora Archambeau are conceited. On the contrary, they are a delightful couple. But they deal in personal services and it got to the point that ordinary browsers were taxing their energies. So they turned their store into a private shopping club that stocks such unusual items as a restored postal box (useful as a bank) and a corker of a gift that opens and records wine bottles, all in two quick movements.

IN CONTRAST to the Palm Beach image, a jewelry store in the next arcade deals in counterfeit diamonds. A window card reads: "The Windsor counterfeit diamond is flawless. Our counterfeit diamonds have all the fire and brilliance of the finest stone ever on earth. A real one-carat diamond can cost $1,000 or more. So at $60 per carat the only difference you will see between ours and the real thing is $940."

One enters Gucci's through a courtyard carpeted with astro grass. A fountain splashes musically in the center, and inside the cash register rings musically as well.

MERRILL Lynch, Pierce, Fenner £ Smith is just across the parking lot from the Royal Trust Bank, which is across the street from Worth Ave. Burgers, which is next door to Biscayne Savings £ Loan with its lime geen carpet and its slick, Monte Carlo-modern white furniture.

Palm Beach residents still recall Marjorie Merriweather Post, the late socialite, who hosted tournaments on her private golf course. The centerpiece of her estate, Mar-A-Largo, was a 112-room mansion that functioned splendidly with 46 servants.

PALM BEACH is in the doldrums. It's the pre-season. In another couple of weeks the limousines and yachts will be depositing the winter regulars. The filthy rich, you know. They've been coming for years, starting with the John Jacob Astors, the John D. Rockefellers, the J.P. Morgans, the William Vanderbilts, the Andrew Carnegies, the Duchess of Marlborough, the Andrew Mellons.

They came by private railway car and stayed on until spring. Florida pioneer Henry Morrison Flagler opened the Royal Poinciana Hotel in the late 1880s, once the world's largest wooden structure with nearly 10 miles of corridors. It burned in 1925. From the ashes rose The Breakers, Palm Beach's fashionable oceanfront hotel.

THE BREAKERS was created by 1,200 workmen, including 75 artisans recruited from Europe.

More of a museum than a hotel, it was designed after a number of European show places — the Villa Medici in Rome, the Palazzo degli Imperiale in Genoa, the Ducal Palace in Venice. Its Florentine fountain that bubbles out front is a replica of one in the Boboli Gardens of Florence.

AS FOR the bar, it offers a feeling of old Araby. (I'm reminded of the bar at the El Minza in Tangier.) Yes, and here's something reminiscent of the era of Scott Fitzgerald. Somehow one expects to encounter Scott staggering out of The Breakers, with Zelda in his arms, preparing to toss her, fully clothed, into the Atlantic.

In this pre-winter season the guests send shock waves through the hallowed halls where once the Vanderbilts and the Carnegies strolled. This is particularly true of the dining room. It's the crowd. I mean the way they are dressed. Especially the men. The waiters are more fashioably attired.

THIS IS the double-knit crowd. And the colors. Burgundy yet. Heavens to Betsy, not at The Breakers!

Oh well, time goes by. But what of the ghosts — those bejeweled and impeccable members of another generation, a time when being a capitalist meant being in fashion, when all that glittered really was gold.

Medical Mix Heals Ghanaian

By ROSE GLOVER

GHANA, WEST AFRICA—When God gave the world its diseases, an ancient Ghanaian proverb says, he also gave it remedies.

Most of Ghana's 10 million people depend upon finding cures for illnesses not in hospitals, through miracle drugs administered by learned physicians, but in natural compounds of bark, leaf, stem and root prescribed by traditional healers.

Visitors to Ghana may visit a traditional shrine where herbalism is practiced and mystic healing rites are performed. The Akkonnedi Shrine in Larteh, 48 kilometres from Accra, the capital of Ghana, offers interesting insights into the uses of herbs and plants. Nana Okomfohene Oparebea is the chief priestess of Akonnedi. She is said to be endowed with powers to heal diseases of all types. Others visit her shrine because they belive she can see into the future. Nana Oparebea also offers training in traditional rites and herbalism.

To Ghanaians, and Africans in general, every plant has some medicinal value and their use for healing purposes is as old as mankind. There's no family living in any rural area of Ghana without some experience in plant medicine.

Through the years, traditional healers, sometimes referred to in Western society as "bush doctors," "juju men," or "witch doctors," have developed and collected a wealth of knowledge on plant medicine. Only in the last two decades has the scientific method of treating illnesses made inroads toward establishing hospitals and medical field units of college-trained doctors and nurses.

Bras d'Or's Future Not Scrap: Danson

HALIFAX (CP) — Defence Minister Barney Danson says the experimental hydrofoil vessel Bras d'Or will not be scrapped so long as he is minister.

But the Canadian Armed Forces are still looking for some sort of facility in which to house the Bras d'Or, Danson said at a news conference Friday.

"We'd still like to find a home for her that will give her the dignity and respect she deserves."

He said there was not sufficient market within the Canadian Armed Forces to make construction of hydrofoil naval vessels economic, and no export market has been found.

The 150-foot-long aluminum vessel is equipped with winglike hydrofoils under her hull which lifted her clear of the water and enabled her twin gas-turbine enginers to push her to speeds of up to 60 knots.

Designed by DeHavilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. of Toronto and built at Sorel, Que., the Bras d'Or was named after the original hydrofoil vessel of the same name which Alexander Graham Bell invented in the early 1900s at Baddeck, N.S. and tested on the Bras d'Or Lakes.

The new Bras d'Or was a $50 million prototype for possible future hydrofoil escort vessels. She underwent sea trials in 1969 and continued in service until 1971 amid extensive publicity as a high achievement of Canadian technology. However, she developed both hairline cracks in her hydrofoils and political trouble in her final year. The government changed its policy and in 1971 she was mothballed at the Halifax Dockyard. She has been high and dry and exposed to the weather ever since.

Defence department officials in Ottawa have expressed concern recently that the Bras d'Or is deteriorating and will have to be scrapped unless something is done with it.

Danson also said the defence department is basically on schedule with its plans to obtain new patrol frigates. However, the calling of tenders has been set back slightly at the request of shipbuilders who will bid on it.

"The consortia that are developing to bid on the new figate are still in the process of formulating their bids," he said. "They have asked for a few weeks to get their proposals together. But it is moving on schedule with this little change of a few weeks."

Federal spending cutbacks will not affect planned purchases of major defence equipment such as the frigates or new aircraft.

Kidnap Letters By Wife?

MONTREAL (CP) — A handwriting expert testified Friday that Jeanne Valence wrote about 15 of the 28 communiques sent to the family of kidnap victim Charles Marion, to officials of the credit union where he was loans manager and to intermediaries in the case.

Mrs. Valence and her husband, Claude, are accused of kidnapping Marion and forcibly detaining him for 82 days. They also face conspiracy and extortion charges.

Michele Langlois-Sarrazin, a handwriting expert employed by the Quebec justice department, told the Superior Court hearing that "comparisons of letters seized in the Valence home—and of a handwriting sample given to police—show that part of the communiques were written by Jeanne Valence."

Mrs. Sarrazin's testimony was the first in the five-week trial to mention Mrs. Valence in relation to the kidnapping.

Victoria Boys Choir Modelled on Vienna

It has been known for centuries that one of the most satisfactory ways in which young boys can gain a general musical education and an avocation that will go with them through life is by becoming choristers in an ensemble instructed and led by a competent teacher and choirmaster.

History is full of such notations; many of the great composers and performers of the past have begun their musical careers as choirboys.

In Victoria, versatile musician Norman Hurrle is creating such an organization. So far the Victoria Boys Choir consists of 20 boys. The ages are 10 to 20 and the ensemble is multi-cultural — in fact Hurrle would like to have some black and Chinese boys in his group.

Hurrle is Canadian-born and trained in Canada, the United States and Britain, studying piano, organ, voice and choral work and holds five diplomas. He has taught in university, private schools and high schools for the past 20 years.

Now he wants to develop the Victoria Boys Choir into a first-class ensemble and will hold auditions for any boys in the above noted age categories who are interested. Conceiving the choir to a limited degree along the lines of such as the Vienna Boys Choir, upon acceptance the boys pay a fee of $10 monthly, or $100 for the 10-month year. In the course of training they learn to read music and understand time values and other theoretical and interpretive aspects leading toward becoming musically aware and competent adults.

Hurrle says secular music of all kinds will be tackled as well as some liturgical music in a program parallel to that of the Vienna Boys. Concerts are in the offing as well as a certain amount of travel.

"It's a fun activity and profitable to the youngsters, giving them something that will go with them through life," he says.

There are four rehearsals a week. The younger boys rehearse Mondays and Tuesdays at 4 p.m. and in the full ensemble rehearsal on Fridays at 4 p.m. The older boys rehearse one evening and one afternoon a week. All rehearsals are held in the choir room of Christ Church Cathedral.

To contact Hurrle, call 477-9892.

Gong Show Here

Firm believers in the credo that government grant agencies look most benignly on those who hustle for themselves, Four Seasons Musical Theatre has proved to be among the most persistent fund-raising organizations in the city. Over a period of three years Four Seasons has garnered more than $3,000 with events such as celebrity auctions, hard times parties and a "roast" of Jerry Gosley.

Latest in the series of events that will benefit the Peter Mannering directed company will be a Celebrity Gong Show to be held in the Empress Hotel Crystal Ballroom Thursday. It will consist of dinner, entertainment and dancing. Doors will open at 7 p.m. for a 7:30 dinner hour and the show will run from 8:45 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. when dancing will begin to the sound of Michael Watson's Bittersweet Mood playing music ranging from familiar forties tunes to modern disco.

The event is being produced in co-operation with CFAX radio. Emcee for the show part of the evening will be Steve Ivings. The entertainment will present local and other celebrities — including Hockey Night in Canada's Howie Meeker — in unexpected performances. Among them will be John Heath, Charles Barber, Marge Adelberg, Selena James, Richard Margison, Sylvia Hosie, Alan Magee, Ken Dobson and Bruce Lowther. Mannering is also promising some surprise guests of honor.

Funds raised will help support children's theatre in Victoria as well as future Four Seasons adult musical productions. Ticket information can be obtained from CFAX radio, 386-2441.

MIXING CONCRETE IN A WHEELBARROW

Masonry Made Simpler

hand around the house

By A. J. HAND

Pre-packaged masonry mixes can be real time and work-savers, but unless you buy the right kind and mix it properly, you'll have nothing but trouble.

Here's what you need to know to avoid many common masonry mistakes:

First of all, prepackaged mixes come in three types — concrete mix, sand mix and mortar mix. Each type is meant for a specific kind of work.

CONCRETE MIX: Use this stuff for slabs or other work that will be two or more inches thick. It's no good for thinner work because it contains gravel. The gravel adds strength but it gets in the way if you try to use it for thin work; the big chunks of gravel will stick up through the surface of your project. An 80-pound bag of concrete mix will give you about half a cubic foot of concrete or the equivalent of a two-square-foot slab, three inches thick.

SAND MIX: This mix contains no gravel — just portland cement and sand — so it's fine for the thinner work you can't do with concrete mix. An 80-pound bag will give you an eight-square-foot slab one inch thick.

MORTAR MIX: This is what you use for laying bricks, block or stone. It has a plastic, adhesive consistency for better workability. Figure an 80-pound bag will lay about 65 bricks or 27 concrete blocks.

MIXING THE MIXES: Hand mixing is easiest if you work in a wheelbarrow. Pour a bag of mix into the wheelbarrow and work it around well with a hoe while it is still dry. Sometimes mixes will settle out during transportation. This preliminary dry mixing will reblend the mix.

Next comes the water. Make a depression in the center of the pile of mix and pour in about two quarts of water. Mix this water in well, then add another quart and mix again.

An 80-pound bag of mix should take about four quarts of water but this figure can vary, so add water slowly, mix, then add more water until you get the right consistency.

What's the right consistency? For concrete and sand mix, use only enough water to make the mix workable. Excess water will only weaken the mix. If the mix is so dry and stiff that you can't shape it with the hoe, it needs more water. But as soon as it's wet enough to be workable, stop adding water.

When mixing mortar, you'll need to use extra water. Aim for a consistency that will slide easily off your trowel, yet will not sag or flow when placed in a pile.

AIR ENTRAINMENT: Concrete that will be exposed to freezing weather and de-icing salts will resist surface chipping and scaling much better if you add an air entraining agent to it.

This is a soapy liquid that forms microscopic bubbles in the finished concrete. These bubbles give freezing water room to expand inside the concrete, and that's how they help prevent chipping. Without this room to expand, freezing water will simply create internal stresses that pop off chips of concrete.

Air entraining agents amy be available at a masonry supplies dealer, or you may have to buy it from a local ready-mix dealer, who will surely have the stuff in big drums.

Take a plastic jug to the dealer and ask him to sell you a couple of quarts of the agent. You won't need much; a teaspoon of Darex — a very common brand — is enough for an 80-pound bag of mix. The proportion may vary with other brands.

Note: If you plan to use an air entraining agent, you'll have to rent a mixer, too. Hand mixing isn't vigorous anough to whip up the necessary bubbles.

APPLIANCES TO USE LESS ENERGY

TORONTO (CP) — By 1981, the shape of ordinary appliances such as refrigerators, washers and dryers, may not be recognizable as the Canadian appliance industry seeks to implement a policy of energy conservation.

"The appliance industry is committed to a reduction in energy usage by refrigerators of 21 per cent by 1981, Edward Von Arb, a vice-president of Inglis Ltd., said in an interview.

"From 1981 onward, the appliance industry also has a goal to reduce energy usage in refrigerators by an average of three per cent a year for the next eight or nine years or so."

Von Arb said the cost of the program to the refrigerator buyer should add about $50 to the price of an average unit.

In order to trim power costs, the new refrigerators will have to be more insulated and, therefore, wider. Beginning this month, every refrigerator made in Canada will carry a label called EnerGuide which will show the energy consumption of the appliance in kilowatt hours a month.

The next major appliance to undergo labelling will be freezers, followed by washers, driers and diswashers.

Von Arb said the newly-shaped refrigerators will still be rectangular but wider.

"The height is already about as high as we can go and so is the depth in relation to the reach of the average user," he said.

"That means the only dimension we have left to vary is the width. Present walls are about 1.25 to 1.8 inches wide. This could go as big as 2.8 inches to 3 inches."

Finnish Beds In 10 Seconds

By ELAINE Q. BARROW

NEW YORK (AP) — A Finnish designer has come up with a way to make a bed in 10 seconds.

In addition, it's a method that works well for hard-to-make beds such as those placed against a wall, bunk beds, loft beds and even those on boats.

Fold back the continental comforter to air the bed. Pull the fitted or flat bottom sheet tight. Toss the comforter into the air and let it settle. Throw on the pillows, and that's it.

The Ratia version of a continental comforter is polyester-filled and washable. Openings at one end let your hands pull the comforter in. A flap at the other end is tucked back once the comforter is settled.

Ratia says the 10-second bed was designed with today's active family in mind.

"In today's world people don't have the time to spend making beds with military precision," he says. "So we've done away with the traditional blanket and spread."

The idea of a large, soft bag covering the surface of a bed was adopted in Europe a long time ago. In Scandinavia, it is called "dyne," and in France, "duvet."

Aside from its practical application, the 10-second bed was used as a publicity gimmick to draw attention to Ratia's move of his home base to New York City and to his entry into the fields of designing furniture, wall coverings, table settings and decorative accessories.

He has gained a reputation as a product-store-interior designer. His first challenge, he says, was designing his own room at the age of 12. After studying in London he began to create designs for home furnishings, luggage and fabrics.

Ratia characterizes the firm's designs as emphasizing function and simplicity, straightforward elegance and bold and vibrant colors.

Discussing the line of sheets, pillows and comforters, Ratia said, "I'm looking for color and expression in a bedroom. I want to wake up a room and make it happy."

In what might be called a seizure of cuteness, Bo-Boo is the tag for a design for sheets and pillowcases for children. No matter. It has bright, bold and eye-catching colors.

"Children should be exposed to good colors," says Ratia. "I believe that simple, straight-forward motifs are best and, for my children's collection, I emphasize the quality of color and simplicity of line.

"The child whose room is fresh and warm, and easy to keep that way, will learn to have a discerning eye."

FREE FOR THE ASKING

By HARRIET HART

With the gift-giving season approching, this is a good time to get some advice about intelligent and economic toy buying.

The six-page folder, Tips on Toy Buying, points out that children's play is not just aimless amusement, but rather an outlet for their self-expression. Through play, children get to know themselves and the world in which they live.

The folder suggests several questions you should ask yourself before you decide to buy any toy. Will it be fun right now? Will it continue to be fun? Is it suitable? (This means, is there sufficient challenge for the child but not more than the youngster can meet). Is it safe? Does it work? Will it last? A toy should be sturdy enough to withstand normal use — and even possible abuse.

With your request please enclose a long (No. 10) self-addressed, stamped envelope and send it to: Canadian Toy Testing Council, P.O. Box 6014, Station J, Ottawa K2A 1T1.

Check Benign Tumors

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I've been told that I have a fibroid tumor of the womb, and that it may be necessary for me to have my uterus removed. I'm sure you must hear this all the time, but my concern is not so much about the operation, but about the possibility that the growth might be cancerous. Are some tumors more dangerous than others? — Mrs. G.L., Wash.

DEAR MRS. L.: Fibroid tumors are almost always benign, or non-cancerous, growths. They originate in various parts of the uterus (womb). Some are attached to the outside covering of the womb; others originate within the muscle wall of the uterus; and still others are attached to the inner lining of the uterus.

These tumors may occur singly or there may be three or more small ones. Their size and position in the uterus are responsible for symptoms that may indicate the need for surgical removal.

When these tumors become large, they may be responsible for unusual or prolonged bleeding, during the menstrual period, or between the menstrual cycles.

In some cases, a large fibroid may press on the urinary bladder which lies directly in front of the uterus. Frequency of urination, with a sense of urgency, then becomes one of the distressing problems.

Similarly, the large bowel, or the rectum lying in back of the uterus, may be compressed by a large fibroid tumor. Then, rectal symptoms may appear.

It is only in rare instances that a fibroid tumor changes its benign characteristics and becomes cancerous. It is for this important reason that doctors constantly keep their patients under careful scrutiny and supervision at regular intervals, in order to be certain that any unusual findings will be picked up quickly.

Sometimes, women become complacent, and perhaps even careless, when once they are assured that the fibroid tumor is entirely benign. They then tend to overlook the need for repeated examinations which is so essential for their safety.

When the doctor does decide that surgery is necessary, it should not be delayed. The refinements of surgical techniques and the safety and excellence of modern anaesthesia make for very rapid recovery from this operation.

Are there any creams or lotions that can really remove lines and winkles from the face of a woman past the age of 50? — Mrs. R. D., Va.

DEAR MRS. D.:

You would believe so by the way women are bombarded by advertisements that promise spectacular results. Hormone creams, once used as a tempting sales pitch, have now been banned .

Cute Little Socks For Christmas Tree

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Dear May:

While attending the Canadian National Exhibition for four days with my husband (who was refereeing the snooker and billiards games), I had a good chance to look around. I did not see one old-fashioned quilt there in the arts and crafts building. I saw some tiny, knitted socks which could be hung from the Christmas tree in which one could place small gifts, but there was no pattern. Do you have one? Mrs. Brandt, Welland, Ont.

What a pity Mrs. Brant did not have a program for there was an excellent display of all the prize-winning entries in the Better Living Centre. Mrs. Elsa Jenkins, who is in charge of the Women's Activities for the CNE, is a personal friend of mine and I had lunch with her and a special tour of the prize winning entries before the Ex. opened.

There was an exceptional display of quilts, as it was the CNE centennial year. I can't begin to describe all of the patterns, but the colors and designs were exquisite and the quilting and needlework of the very highest calibre.

The knitting and crochet as well as the macrame, along with the embroidery, needle point and rug making made a fascinating exhibition of craft work. I wish I could congratulate all the prize winners individually.

I was particularly interested to see the entries from the veteran's hospitals, with St. Anne's de Bellevue hospital, which is not too far from my home, carrying off quite a number of prizes. These winners were all gentlemen! I'm told they prepare all year long for this event.

I do have a pattern for the tiny socks that caught Mrs. Brandt's eye. They, of course, can be made from oddments of wool and are rather fun to hang from the Christmas tree with a small present (such as ear-rings), or even with a very small glass ball popped into the top. They are always gay and colorful.

I have mimiographed the instructions, and they can be obtained from the address below for 50 cents, PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope.

Good looking and neat stocking-stitch raglan cardigans are featured as this week's pattern. This practical everyday or dress-up sweater can be knitted with either a V-neck or round neck style, suitable either for girls or boys.

The size range given on the one leaflet ranges from size six to sixteen, to fit chest measurments of 24 to 36 inclusive. The yarn is heavier than a 4-ply, yet not quite as heavy as a knitted worsted, and makes an ideal cardigan for wear around the house or under a coat for extra warmth in the coldest winter weather.

To order Leaflet No. 0978, send 75 cents, PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope (a long envelope, if possible). THE BEAN JAR PATH TO GOOD, OLD DAYS

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — When Elizabeth Aigner wants to recall the good old days, she looks at a jar of green beans.

Mrs. Aigner canned the beans 57 years ago. She liked the way they looked so she kept putting off using them. They eventually became a remembrance of her long-departed youth.

"For years I've kept the jar on my pantry shelf, and whenever I want to think about the days when I had more time, I look at them," she says.

And she says the beans will stay where they are: at age 80, she's not about to change a pattern of a lifetime.

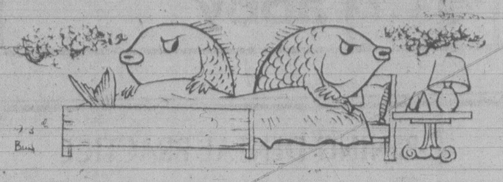
KISSING GOURAMIS ARE NOT VERY TENDER

Wonderful World of Animals



By Dr. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: I'm disappointed because my kissing gouramis have turned out to be pretty mean fish. How come. — V.S.

Dear V.S.: Helstoma temmicki frequently do kiss and make up among themselves when they quarrel. But remember, they are a member of the cichlid family and as such are prone to be pugnacious and possibly predatory where other fish are concerned.

Dear Dr. Miller: My dog gets something the doctor calls flea-bite dermatitis, an allergy caused by contact with or bites from fleas. The doctor treated it, he got rid of the fleas and it was cured. Now it has come back some around the base of the tail. How is this possible when a dog is wearing an almost new flea collar?

Dear S.M.: Could be the skin condition now present is something else and not flea-bite dermatitis. It's also possible for fleas to hop aboard and cause a skin reaction before they die and/or depart even a flea collar is being worn. If the problem is persistent, your dog should be rechecked befoe more damage is done.

Dear Dr. Miller: Will a six-weeks-old kitten coming from a hungry home ever catch up to other kittens in size? Its mother had good food but not enough of it. — S.S.

Dear S.S.: If no other problems are present and your kitten receives optimum nutrition in the meantime, yes, he can catch up in size. At four months of age, he would probably be equal to other kittens in weight and appearance. His behavioral characteristics toward other kittens might be slightly altered; more aggressive, perhaps. His physical performance in areas such as jumping would probably be poorer than peer pussycats.

Dear Dr. Miller: Chiquita, my Chihuahua, is very pregnant. Lots of people want her puppies. Five already have deposits on them. How many more can I expect than that? It's her first litter so I have no way to know how many puppies she should have. You can tell me, maybe? — L.F.

Dear L.F.: I can't tell you as well as Chiquita's own doctor can. I can tell you, though, that first litters of Chihuahuas generally are a bit on the small side. Great expectations are a bit unrealistic as far as both size and number are concerned. It's unlikely her "deposits" will equal those you have already collected.

Dear Dr. Miller: My husband, an ardent fisherman, has an idea for providing exercise for our parakeet. He proposes rigging up a halter for Junior (the bird) attaching light fishing line to it, attached to rod and reel. He figures the bird can fly almost free attached to this super-long "leash" and still be retrieved when necessary. Would it work? — B.W.

Dear B.W.: Before getting hooked on this idea, remember Junior is a parakeet, not a penguin. There would be far too many in-flight hazards to such an arrangement including feathers or feet fouled up by the line and the return. That's assuming, of course, Junior could get off the ground in the first place. Don't believe your husband's line about how well this would work; it's not for the birds.

Bio-dex

Nov. 5/78

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Pick a safe pursuit for this low Bio-dex day. Read, paint, catch a movie or just sit and meditate.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	If the world is sitting on your shoulder it may be time to shrug it off. Beware of false hopes.

The British celebrate November 5th with fireworks and bonfires where "the Guy" is burned. This dates from 1605 when Guy Fawkes and his friends tried to blow up the British parliament. Many of the other conspirators escaped, but every year Guy Fawkes is remembered as the ringleader of the "Gunpowder Plot". Low Bio-dex or not, November 5th was certainly a bad day for Guy Fawkes.

6-10 Neutral Cycle-	There may be some pleasant surprises in store. Avoid over-reacting, especially if your emotional level is low.

Do cats have biorhythms? One of my readers claims that this is the only explanation for her cat's erratic behavior. Some days the animal pesters her for attention; at other times he sleeps for hours or disappears into a nearby park. Some of you cat owners might like to look for a pattern to all this. If you discover a Bio-dex for cats I'd sure appreciate hearing about it. My guess is that all animals have some kind of inner clock, but I would be surprised if they follow the human Bio-dex cycles.

LUCKY DUCKY

SEATTLE (AP) — No one in Hawaii will believe there's a four-legged duck until it appears in person, so Lan Roberts says his radio station is giving Ginny Quackers an all-expense paid trip to the islands.

Ginny Quackers is a Peking duck who achieved fame — if not fortune — by entering the world on July 4 with two extra legs.

Roberts, a disc jockey for KORL, says Ginny Quackers and her owner, Viola Cushman, "will have a big Hawaiian welcome, with a red carpet, dancing girls and a limo to the hotel."

"We're working with the mayor's office on getting the key to the city for the duck. After all, this is an election year," he said.

DEAR ABBY: All through school I went with Steve (fake name), although my mother hated him. He was a really nice kid, but he was poor, and my mom kept telling me that I could do better. She even told him to his face that she would rather see her daughter dead than married to him!

Well, we loved each other, and got married against my mother's wishes. Naturally, Steve and my mom don't speak to each other.

I recently had a baby (my mom's first grandchild) and now she's trying to make up with Steve, but he's still hurt about the way she treated him all those years.

Mom invited us to her house, and Steve says I can go if I want to but he'll never set foot in her house. He says if she wants to see the baby she'll have to come here while he's at work.

What can I do? I can't blame Steve for feeling the way he does, but she's still my mother and this terrible feud between them makes it awfully hard on me.

DOWN IN THE DUMPS

DEAR DOWN: I hope you can persuade Steve that forgiveness is a mark of maturity. Life is too short to hold a grudge.

Harry E. Fosdick said, "Hating people is like burning down your house to get rid of a rat." Wise man, Harry.

DEAR ABBY: This is the second marriage for both of us, and it would be perfect except for one thing.

My husband is a very successful small-town merchant who is well-known and admired in this community.

Every day he pockets part of the cash he takes in so he won't have to pay so much income tax.

Is this considered a serious offence? What can happen to him if he is caught?

I don't dare ask anyone but you. Please print your answer. I love this man and I am worried.

NAME WITHELD

DEAR NAME: Avoiding income tax is a very serious offence and if caught and found guilty your husband could be fined, jailed or both. So if you love him, persuade him to play it straight. He may not eat as well, but he'll sleep better.

DEAR ABBY: We are two secretaries who have a peculiar problem. We have been instructed to answer the telephone in the following manner: "Good morning. This is Mr. Johnson's office."

Occasionally we get some smart aleck on the other end who says, "Well, what do you know now — a talking office!"

Do you have a snappy retort for those people who get smart with us? Thank you. — THE GIRLS IN THE OFFICE.

DEAR GIRLS: Don't feel that you have to come up with a jab. Ignore it.

'High Chic' Pillbox Hats Dot N.Y. Fashion Shows

By JOANNE WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bern Conrad opened his spring-summer fashion collection 1979 with a group of sexy black-and-white disco gear.

These are dotted and textured net bodies over bras and camisoles worn with short-slit skirts, little hats and spiked heel shoes.

There are also lots of linens and cottons for shorts, skirts jodphur pants and jackets in such colors as mauve, blue and naturals. The shoulders of jackets always are padded or extended.

There are cotton dresses, short and close to the body, again with pleated or extended shoulder treatment. The waists of these are cinched by tucking or wrapped and sashed.

Another cotton group features short slip dresses with wide belts, some slit thigh-high and side buttoned.

There is more disco dressing — this time for the roller skating crowd, complete with bobby sox, colorful knee pads, helmets and goggles. They are worn with tights, cotton skit sweat shirts and very short, tank tops. The models roller-skated all over the runway.

The best looks were easy cotton suits with various types of jackets, shoulders padded and straight skirts, mostly split in the back and worn with shirts.

Another amusing look is the sailor suit, which was also noticeable in recent Paris collections. These suits have crisp white middy shirts trimmed in Navy braid, worn with tight pants that tie under the knee or stop just above the ankle.

Another house, Adini by India Imports of Rhode Island, is showing a non-ethnic collection mostly made of Indian fabrics. Cotton is used for short busboys' jackets and good-looking flyers' jackets with inverted back pleats.

There are some nice shirts with shawl collars and houndstooth-check long shirts worn over pants and skirts for the "pajama game" look. Pants are pleated and slim- legged like jodphurs, or drawstring-waisted and straight.

An Indian voile called "mull" is used for dirndl skirts and tops. Other voile skirts are tiered and full. Soft blazers go over these. Voile prints are in lovely shadings of teal, vieux rose and nutmeg.

Adini's new higher-priced division, Esthete, uses lots of silk, cotton cambric, georgette and chiffon. Standouts include '40s type dresses with pleated shoulders, both short sleeved and sleeveless.

Evening georgettes in peacock prints are quite spectacular with plunging backs and long triangular trains.

A finicky friend loves bananas and complains about unsightly brown skins on the ones she refrigerates to hold for lunch breaks. Then she began experimenting and learned bananas placed in a brown paper bag don't turn brown in the refrigerator.

Don't forget to tell the Income Tax Department you moved to a new address. Every year income tax returns and refunds aren't delivered because IRS couldn't find the taxpayers. If you believe you still have a refund due after waiting patiently for months, even years, you may be on the lists of taxpayers IRS is trying to locate.

★★★

For the new fall look, you can up-date older, overblouses and soft-fabric, straight-cut jackets by running narrow elastic through the hemlines. Cut elastic to fit waistline. Attach a safety pin to guide elastic through hem tunnel. Overlap elastic ends half an inch. Before stitching elastic, see if you really like the blouson look.

★★★

If the carpeting needs cleaning in the new home you bought or rented, call several carpet cleaners to ask cost differences between cleaning when the house is empty and after you move in. You might save a few dollars when the house is empty and the cleaners don't have to spend time moving furniture.

★★★

Lucky the bride-to-be who shops for a size 12, or smaller, wedding gown. Larger sizes go out first at many shops, so smaller sizes often end up as clearance or sample gowns on sale several times a year before new shipments arrive. Don't worry about style of an off-season wedding gown bargain. There's very little, if any, style change in classic gowns from one season to the next.

4-Day Week Not U.K. Plan, Sources Say

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press

LONDON — The government's proposed "short-time" scheme to subsidize workers facing layoffs is not an immediate move toward a general four-day week in Britain, sources say.

Those close to Prime Minister James Callaghan say they are uncertain how the scheme will finally develop. The London Standard suggested it was a scheme to produce a four-day work week to reduce the army of unemployed on welfare.

Government sources say the plan is designed to keep men working when plants decide on major layoffs. Currently Britain has about 1.5 million unemployed.

In the throne speech opening the final session of Parliament, the Queen promised that following consultations with management and unions, the government would introduce legislation "to improve arrangements for compensation of workers on short-time and to reduce redundancies at times of high unemployment by encouraging the alternative of short-time working."

However, a Callaghan aide said the government isn't thinking of the plan as an opening move toward a shorter work week.

The first pressure for the short-time proposal — which would put Britain in line with her European allies — came from the National Economic Development Office's industrial sector working party on man-made fibres.

It urged creation of a scheme that would help companies hold their basic work forces together during hard times and keep groups of skilled workers intact, rather than have them go onto welfare, or switch to unskilled jobs.

Callaghan's proposal is for employers preparing for layoffs to put workers on part time instead and pay them 75 per cent of the basic wage for the hours lost.

Employers would be compensated out of public funds and the money would be taxable.

Already, the plan is being met with suspicion. Alan Fisher, leader of the 700,000-strong National Union of Public Employees and a member of the economics committee of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), said: "This does not appear to be a realistic way of tackling the serious problem of unemployment. Instead of short-time working, we need a shorter working week without loss of pay."

Jan Hildreth, director-general of the Institute of Directors, said the proposals could only damage job prospects and the standard of living of the entire country.

The Times, in an editorial, says: "The danger of schemes of this sort is that, no matter how sensible in conception, they become in practice a subsidy from the state for employers to keep on their books employees for whom they have no useful work."

B.C.'s French Hang On

By ROGER SMITH
Canadian Press

VANCOUVER — One of the corner grocery stores in Vancouver's St. Sacrement district, not far from city hall, still has the same name—L'Epicerie Granger—given to it by the former French-Canadian owners. It is run now by a Chinese family.

In nearby Coquitlam, where the old Maillardville community is the best known francophone bastion west of the Rockies, 3,335 people listed French as their mother tongue in the 1971 census. Five years later, that number had declined by almost 1,000.

Those aren't the only depressing developments for British Columbia's 38,430 francophones.

Though theirs is Canada's other official language, French speakers are only the province's third-largest ethnic language group, outnumbered by 80,970 German speakers and 46,655 Chinese.

And the assimilation rate for francophones in B.C.—the highest in Canada—hovers around 70 per cent. That means of every 10 children born to French-speaking families, only three will still use the language when they grow up.

Francophones, however, refuse to read in those statistics the eventual doom of their community.

"It's always been that way," said Robert Godard, parish priest for St. Sacrement whose church, like Notre Dame de la Paix in New Westminster and Notre Dame de Lourdes in Maillardville, draws its congregation both from the immediate area and from those French who have moved to the suburbs.

"Young ones go astray, but others fill the gap. And now there is a movement, stronger than before, to maintain the French language and culture."

Buoyed by a provincial government decision that will allow francophone children to be educated totally in French, that movement centres on several institutions that have survived the ups and downs of Vancouver's francophone community.

The Federation de Franco-Columbien and the Centre Culturel Columbien in the St. Sacrement district offer information services, social events and are co-ordinating efforts to sign up children for the francophone program.

Down the street, past La Caisse Populaire (the French credit union), B.C.'s only French-language newspaper, Le Soleil, with a circulation of 3,000, operates out of a two-room office tucked behind a used book store. Its editor, Jean-Claude Arluison, is running for school board in an effort to aid French language education.

Surprisingly, in a province with a reputation for redneck reaction against federal bilingual policies, and where a cabinet minister once complained about French on cereal boxes, francophone efforts are also getting a boost from increased anglophone interest.

"What's happening among francophones is that there's a new pride for their language being established," said Leon Lebrun, principal of one of five Coquitlam elementary schools offering French immersion instruction, aimed primarily at anglophone students.

"I think some of that pride comes when they see English Canadians taking an interest in their language."

Florence Wilton, French supervisor for the Coquitlam school district, said interest in the program, with 100 per cent immersion from kindergarten through Grade 3 and partial French thereafter, has mushroomed in the last few years.

"We started with two small kindergarten classes 10 years ago and now we have well over 200 entering kindergarten in eight different classes."

Lebrun, who grew up in Maillardville but like many of his peers now lives in more modern suburbs, said he spoke no English until Grade 2 "which is strange in B.C., but that's how strong the French community was."

"But it's fading away, there's no doubt about it, as the old people die off. Houses are being sold to immigrants and the French Canadian community slowly disappears."

Steps taken to help stop that process include a $500,000 neighborhood house now under construction and the formation of a central committee pursue more efficiently the common aims of the 20 groups it represents.

Though such steps help preserve Maillardville's character, they do little to slow the disappearance of French among children under the influence of peer-group pressure that has them watching U.S. television and tossing off English slang.

That's why francophone educationists are so enthused about the provincial government's French education policy, announced this September. Under the policy, a school district will be required to provide courses totally in French if a minimum of 10 students request it.

"If the French in B.C. want their children to keep their language and culture, the only way is to enter French classes or a French school," said Bernard Pornin, educational administrator at the Federation des Franco-Columbiens.

"The immersion programs are very good for the anglophone who wants a good knowledge of the language, but our children want more than that."

FALCONS GO SOUTH

TORONTO (CP) — Eight peregrine falcons, released in Algonquin provincial park last fall in the hope of bringing the almost-extinct bird back to Ontario, have migrated south, a spokesman for the Ontario ministry of natural resources said.

Anglican Executive Endorses WCC Tack

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — The national executive of the Anglican Church of Canada has defeated a motion to set up a special fund for contributions to a program to combat racism.

However, delegates did reaffirm their support of the World Council of Churches (WCC) program to combat racism and agreed to ask the council for more information on how such grants are awarded.

The church's world relief and development fund has stopped contributing to the world council program at least until December when the council will review the awarding of grants, said Rev. George Cramm, director of the Anglican fund.

The disclosure earlier this year that the council's program was making grants to such organizations as the Patriotic Front in Rhodesia and the Southwest Africa People's Organization incited controversy among Anglican Church members and others.

Some saw it as aid to guerrilla groups and wondered whether the money was being used as intended — for refugee camps, medical aid and food.

An Anglican Church spokesman said it was necessary give the aid through those organizations because they controlled the areas where aid was needed.

POLL SAYS DRAPEAU

MONTREAL (CP) — A public opinion poll released today shows Mayor Jean Drapeau headed for victory in the Nov. 12 municipal elections.

The poll, done by Radio-Canada, the French-language network of the CBC, shows Drapeau in the lead with 43 per cent of the vote.

His two main opponents, Serge Joyal and Guy Duquette, had 17 and six per cent, respectively.

25 years For Torch Murder

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gurmail Singh, 33, convicted of killing his wife by setting her on fire last March, was sentenced Thursday to 25 years in prison without parole on a charge of first-degree murder.

Mr. Justice Peter Morse of Court of Queen's Bench sentenced Gurmail after a jury deliberation of more than nine hours that began Wednesday and ended Thursday.

"I agree completely with the verdict," Mr. Justice Morse told court. "It is difficult to understand the horrible and desperate crime that you have committed, that of burning your wife to death."

The crown argued the motive for the murder was a $72 000 life insurance policy Singh had purchased for his wife a few months before her death.

Project North holding Indian education parley

By DOREEN HUNTER

Project North, an inter-church association working to promote the rights of native people of Canada, is sponsoring a meeting on Indian education in Sidney at the Margaret Vaughn-Birch Hall, on Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Another meeting on the subject will be at Sacred Heart Church in Saanich on Monday at the same time.

Church members, teachers and other concerned citizens will have the opportunity to hear Indian leaders talk about education for their people.

The meeting was arranged at the request of Saanich elders, Gabe Bartleman, and Dave Elliott, two men who believe it is the most important issue facing the native population in B.C.

They believe that concerned non-natives will want to learn about successful education programs developed by native people, incorporating cultural and traditional methods of teaching youngsters into the present-day curriculum. Many native leaders believe such programs hold the key to survival and well-being of their people.

But recent decisions made in Ottawa and Victoria are causing serious problems for Indian education throughout B.C. Changes affecting the education of hundreds of youngsters have been made without input from the native people themselves.

The Project North meetings are an effort to present to non-natives the importance of this issue, and what native leaders are recommending.

Top education experts from the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs will be a guest panel of speakers and include Philip Paul, vice-president (education), Rosalie Tyzia, former chief education researcher, Millie Poplar, education researcher, and Louise Mandell, staff adviser.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

"Imprinted at London by Bonham, Norton and John Bull Printers to the Kings most Excellent Majestie: 1628."

That is at the bottom of the title page of a small New Testament in the King James Version which I found in November, 1945, while rummaging in a bin of old books in a shop in Guildford, England, and which I was able to buy for a few shillings.

This book—about an inch thick and with pages four by two inches—is one of the earliest, if not the earliest, New Testaments to be published in English which can be carried in pocket or purse: it was issued just 17 years after the publication of the King James Version of the Bible in 1611.

The King James Version of the whole Bible had an initial printing of 20,000. It was three inches thick and had 1,500 pages which were slightly larger than 16 by 10 inches. It was designed mainly for use in churches. But soon there was a demand for editions which could be conveniently handled by ordinary readers in their homes, and this led to the producing of small copies of the New Testament.

A name was written inside the front cover of my copy, but it has been scratched out. Inside the back cover there are some numbers which suggest that in 1819 someone calculated it to be 191 years old: probably the person who owned it at that time marvelled at its great age.

Its pages are yellowed with the centuries, and the leather binding is worn and not as firm as it once was. The printing and spelling are archaic: the s looks like like an f; "Jerusalem" is spelled "Hierusalem", "Acts" "Actes", "Romans" "Romanes." And it differs in a few ways from the currently available editions of the King James Version. For example, at Matthew 16:16 it gives "Thou art Christ", rather than "Thou art the Christ" as we now have it. That change, and several others, were made in 1762 when at Cambridge a so-called "Standard Edition" was issued. Seven years later some Oxford scholars, not to be outdone by their Cambridge brothers, issued another "Standard Edition", which is the basis of the edition we have today.

In Britain the 1611 Bible is generally called "The Authorized Version," whereas in North America we usually call it "The King James Version" (it was published during the reign of James I). Actually it was not royally "authorized", but only "Appointed to be read in churches." The only version to be "authorized" was the Bishop's Bible of 1568.

For many generations of English-speaking Christians the King James Version has been the Bible. During the past century or so many revisions and new translations have been made in efforts to make the Bible more understandable, but it has been only during the past 30 years that new versions have had widespread use in the churches. I must admit that I rarely use the King James Version either in my private reading or in church services. But for me my old New Testament somehow represents the continuity of Christian faith and the timelessness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

An Oxford scholar, Professor G. D. Kilpatrick (a transplanted British Columbian), said a few years ago, "It must be remembered that each translation (of the Bible) is something of an interim report." The King James Version has had a very long interim—and it isn't yet finished.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

MP says pope election start of an era

EDMONTON (CP) — Douglas Roche, a Progressive Conservative MP, says the election of a Polish pope opens a new ecumenical era that will affect all Christians.

Roche, MP for Edmonton-Strathcona and former editor of the Western Catholic Reporter, told the 85th anniversary dinner of the First Baptist Church that because Pope John Paul II is from a Communist country, he is particularly sensitive to the issues of religious liberty and co-operation.

"He has first-hand experience of the ways to protect the faith against authoritarian encroachment and make the light of the gospel shine in the modern world," Roche said.

Home place of healing says lecturer

Houston

Nancy E. Houston, a Christian Science lecturer from Urbana, Illinois, will discuss the healing effect of viewing one's home as more than just a physical structure when she speaks here at 8 p.m. Nov. 14.

"Whether we live on wheels, or in the suburbs, whether we're in a nursing home, a college dorm, in the ghetto—like the snail and his shell, we take our concept of home with us wherever we go," says the lecturer in the talk, titled Is Anybody at Home? It will be in the auditorium of the church at 1205 Pandora.

The lecturer explains, "home is within us—not without. Home is an idea—not a physical dwelling. Home is where we find the Christ and are touched by its healing influence."

A spiritual, rather than a material, view of home is revolutionary, Miss Houston concedes—but not new. "The apostle Paul said, 'In him we live, and move, and have our being.' Wasn't he talking about home? Our spiritual home is God, good?"

This deeper dimension to our view of home can ease tensions between family members, says Miss Houston. "When the concept of home is spiritual, each member will feel comfortable, wanted, and loved, and will want to be there."

The concept of God as Father-Mother, a better known teaching of Christian Science, is elaborated by the lecturer. "The word 'fatherhood' symbolizes the creative source or cause from which anything proceeds. The underlying law of creation is understood through the fatherhood of God. Motherhood is an equally natural metaphor."

In home life, says the lecturer, "the fatherhood qualities of power, stability, strength, and courage, as well as the motherhood attributes of intuition, compassion, patience, tenderness, constancy, purity, and graciousness may be expressed equally by either parent."

Whether you're living in a large family or by yourself, Miss Houston adds, "these qualities can be exemplified in human life. They present the presence and power of God."

Before becoming a full-time Christian Science practitioner—engaged in healing through prayerful reliance on God alone—Miss Houston was an assistant professor of physical education at the University of Illinois where she received her Masters degree.

In 1972 she was elected to the board of leadership of First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

City delegates at Dallas synod

At a constitutional synod in Dallas, Texas, about 190 delegates representing 206 parishes in seven dioceses of the breakaway traditionalist Anglican Church in North America discarded their temporary name in favor of the permanent name of the Anglican Catholic Church.

Two delegates from Victoria were Dennis Byrne and Rev. Peter Wilkinson, priest of St. Athanasius' Church in Victoria. The local church, one of the first in western Canada, holds a sung mass service every Sunday at 2 p.m. at Grace Church, 1273 Fort, preceded by Sunday school at 1:45 p.m.

The choice of name for the new church was in a measure influenced by Bishop Francisco Pagtakhan of the Philippine Independent Catholic Church, who pleaded for a non-geographical name descriptive of the church's place in the Universal Church.

He noted the interest already expressed in joining it both in his own country and elsewhere.

The four bishops, representing the four established dioceses, were requested to seek communion with the Polish National Church—the main body of Old Catholics in North America—as a priority in moving towards communion with the main Catholic bodies—the Orthodox and Roman Catholic churches.

Two speakers for the council of bishops stressed that Christendom and western civilization are facing a dangerous crisis, that the world is witnessing a savage attack on the sanctity of family life, on the sacramental nature of marriage, on the Christian moral code and on the entire faith of the Church.

The bishops also emphasized that the Anglican Catholic Church is not just a protest against the abuses within the Anglican Church, but is essentially a branch of the Church Universal, with a dynamic mission to call Anglicans back to their Catholic heritage and the "faith once for all delivered unto the Saints."

They added that the Anglican Catholic Church must be uncompromising in its adherence to its Anglican heritage of sacraments, scriptures and tradition.

A draft constitution was approved in principle and referred to an editorial committee for editing and submission to the several dioceses before being presented in final draft form to the next synod. Provisional canons were approved.

Bunyan story Sunday film

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS has come to the silver screen.

The 300th anniversary of the publication of John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress will be celebrated by the showing of a 72-minute film adaption of the book at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 2964 Tillicum.

It follows the original allegory and Pilgrim's vivid experiences from the city of Destruction to the Celestial city are effectively portrayed. Vanity Fair, Doubting Castle, Apollyon and Worldly Wiseman are all included.

Pilgrim's Progress, described as "the book next inspired to the Bible," was written in Bedford jail where Bunyan was incarcerated after Charles II was restored to the English throne.

A dissenter, Bunyan's crime was that he had been a lay preacher. For that he served 12 years and out of the experience his mighty book was born.

Unhappiness Tied to Chemical Imbalance

TORONTO (CP) — A Swedish doctor says the reason man is the only species on earth to build spaceships to the moon or to use stimulants may be because he lacks enough chemicals in his brain to keep him happy.

Dr. Lars Terenius of Uppsala University, who discovered the presence of morphine-like drugs in the brain, suggests only half-jokingly that man's unique drive for achievement — and his desire to get drunk — may reflect his lack of enough self-generated euphoria.

Since his discovery of endorphins in the human brain, it has been found that the opiate-like chemicals are made elsewhere in the body, in the pituitary and adrenal glands, Dr. Terenius said in an interview.

It now appears that endorphins may be involved in other functions besides the perception of pain.

"I tend to think of these substances as modulatory — involved in the fine-tuning of sensory adaptation," he said.

"Normally, I am not aware of my watch, but if I switch it to the right wrist, it feels uncomfortable. I'm aware of it for two or three days until I adapt to the change."

Endorphins also may be involved in the fine-tuning of movement, permitting mammals to move smoothly, unlike robots, and in the fine tuning of hormones released by the pituitary gland.

Dr. Terenius said previous research on the action of opiates in the body has provided tools for investigation of endorphins.

Dr. Terenius said pain-prone patients, persons who suffer from migraine headaches and those with an unusually low threshold of pain, may have something wrong with the function of their endorphin system.

The malfunctioning may be reversed in the case of persons with an unusually high threshold of pain, he said.

The same malfunction may be involved in schizophrenia.

He said beta-endorphin is a form of an amino-acid compound, a particular fragment of which has been duplicated synthetically in the laboratory. Studies in the Netherlands seem to show that the fragments have a beneficial effect on schizophrenic patients.

Dr. Terenius said his Swedish research team plans similar studies and that, if further research confirms the Dutch work, it will provide further evidence that schizophrenia is a metabolic disease — an abnormal processing of chemicals in the body.

The other winners this year are: Dr. Sydney Brenner, Cambridge University ; Dr. Donald S. Frederickson, United States National Institute of Health, and Dr. Edwin G. Krebs, University of Washington.

'TOO MANY DOWNERS'

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Canadians are swallowing too many tranquillizers, a seminar on depression was told this week.

Dr. Jack Diamond of the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital said tranquillizers, most commonly Valium, are grossly misused.

He said they produce apathy in most people, but in some cases the inhibition-lowering effects of Valium cause hypersensitivity and violence.

Dr. Diamond said Valium should not be used for more than two weeks and that patients should realize that medication is not the only way to alleviate depression.

Psychiatrist Dr. Peter Payne said, however, that patients and their families should not give up on tranquillizers because they sometimes take two or three weeks to work effectively.

Suicide Aiding Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wai Hui, 20, was charged today with aiding a suicide in the death of his father, a Chinese businessman whose body was found Tuesday with a cyanide-soaked rag in his mouth, Metropolitan Toronto police said.

Sgt. Harry Bryan said police were satisfied the man committed suicide so his family could collect on a life insurance policy.

The son is in Canada on a student visa and was studying for a science degree at the University of Toronto, S.Sgt. Bryan said.

The body of Hui Ka-kwan, 53, was found in a parking lot. Tests showed he died of the combined effects of choking and cyanide poisoning, police said today.

Police said the man had been living in Toronto hotels recently with his wife and four children. He did not keep an appointment Tuesday with Canadian immigration officials to extend visas for himself and his family.

Weddings

Carlson — Konrath

On the evening of Oct. 7, 1978, a double ring candlelight ceremony in St. Joseph's Catholic Church united Jeannie Konrath and Wayne Carlson. Father Joe Ponic entered the church after Debbie Konrath and Angela Janusonis, sister and cousin of the bride, lit the candles on the altar. Louise Wells, bridesmaid, then came down the aisle dressed in a dusty rose polyester gown trimmed with white lace, followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Fern Walker, in an identical gown of dusty blue. Both girls carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and wore a small off-white flower in their hair. Jeannie entered the church on the arms of her parents, Frank and Mary-Lou Konrath, to the music of the Hawaiian Wedding Song, played by Robert Neufeld. The bride's gown was floor length crimped cotton, accented by thin strips of white satin ribbon (Yofi's Creation). She wore a small Juliet cap with waist length veil and carried a bouquet of pink roses and white carnations. The bride's mother wore a long beige gown accented by pink roses and white mums, while the groom's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Carlson, wore a long rust and white patterned gown and a white orchid. The groom wore a champagne-white tuxedo, and his best man Dave Calder and usher Rex Coburn, wore dark brown tuxedos. Susan Carlson, sister of the bride, read from the Bible, and a poem from the Prophet.

Reception followed at the Olde England Inn. Gary Carlson, brother of the groom and master of ceremonies, introduced the immediate family to guests. Special guest, Father Bernie Hanley, was present at the ceremony and reception. Art Bishop, the bride's grandfather, proposed the toast. Mr. Paul Zasitko, close friend of the Konraths, made and decorated the beautiful, three tiered, pink and white cake. Later in the evening, the bride changed into a white satin jumpsuit accented with a yellow rose. This was chosen as her going away outfit. The couple will return to Vancouver where they will live, after a short honeymoon. Many thanks to Father Joe Ponic, Mavis Mayne, Gladys Langkamer, Paul Zasitko and the staff at the Olde England Inn.

Brekke — Wheatcroft

Rev. Laura Butler officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the Metropolitan United Church on June 10, 1978, when Cheryl Ann Wheatcroft, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bard Wheatcroft, exchanged wedding vows with Bruce Donald Brekke, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Brekke.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a gown of white chiffon, featuring a lace and seed pearl bodice and chapel train. Pearl and lace headdress held her floor-length veil edged with lace, she carried a cascade of yellow roses, mums and baby's breath. Maid of honour was the bride's sister Miss Linda Wheatcroft. Bridesmaids were Brenda Viney, cousin of the bride, Adrianne Fawthorpe and Junior bridesmaid Candice Fawdry, cousin of the bride. All wore identical gowns of yellow dotted Swiss organza trimmed with wide white lace. They carried bouquets of yellow and white daisies, and wore a cluster of white and yellow daisies in their hair. Mr. Gerald Spencer was best man and ushers were Messrs. Jim Brekke, brother of the groom, Dave Metcalfe, and Junior usher Bob Fawdry, cousin of the bride, all wore beige tuxedos with Mocha trim. The mother of the bride wore a pale pink full-length gown of pale blue with silver accessories, and a pink rosebud corsage.

A dinner reception was held at the Esquimalt Recreation Centre. Mr. John Sherry, cousin of the bride, proposed the toast to the happy couple. After dinner and the cutting of the cake, dancing was enjoyed by all. The bride changed into a 3-piece yellow gabardine suit for going away and an orchid corsage. After a honeymoon trip to California, the young couple will reside in Victoria.

Clark — Larson

The Metropolitan United Church, beautifully decorated for the Thanksgiving weekend, was the scene of a double-ring ceremony on Saturday, October 7, 1978, when Joan Patricia, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Larson of Victoria, exchanged wedding vows with Artann Perry Clark, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Arthur H. Clark (ret'd) of Santa Barbara, California. Rev. E. Laura Butler officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose an off shoulder daisy lace and white chiffon dress with a train. The long veil, embroidered with matching daisies, was held in place by a band of yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath. She carried a matching cascade bouquet. The maid of honour, Miss Karen Larson, sister of the bride, and bridesmaid Miss Deborah Camp, wore matching long green jersey gowns. They carried bouquets of yellow and white daisy chrysanthemums. The groom wore a grey and black tuxedo, as did the best man, Mr. Timothy Ewert of Palm Springs, and the usher Mr. David Larson, brother of the bride.

A dinner reception and dance was held at the Uplands Golf Club following the ceremony. Mr. James Blake, uncle of the bride and master of ceremonies, proposed the toast to the bride. He read a telegram, and greeted guests and relatives from Victoria, Spokane, Seattle, Santa Barbara, Palm Springs, Edmonton, Vancouver, and Saudi Arabia.

Sadat Snubs Arab Envoys

BAGHDAD (AP) — The 20-country Arab League summit meeting here sent a delegation to Cairo today to try to persuade Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to abandon his peace initiative with Israel, but Sadat refused to see them.

In a forceful speech to the Egyptian parliament, Sadat said neither he nor any other Egyptian official would receive the four-man delegation, led by Lebanese Prime Minister Salim el-Hoss.

Then, referring to reports that the summit was considering an offer to Egypt of billions of dollars if the peace talks with Israel are broken off, Sadat declared: "All the millions in the world will not buy the will of Egypt!"

The official Iraqi news agency said the other members of the delegation are Syrian Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar, Iraqi Baathist party official Tariq Aziz and Foreign Minister Ahmed al-Suedy of the United Arab Emirates.

The delegation had arrived in Cairo shortly before Sadat's speech and went straight to a hotel.

Sadat refused to attend the summit, which was called by Iraq specifically to oppose the Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel and the Middle East peace offensive launched by the Egyptian president with his trip to Jerusalem last year.

While a condemnation of the separate Egyptian-Israeli peace move is likely from the summit, a united stand on what sanctions, if any, to take against Sadat appears unlikely.

Delegates reported today that moderate states led by Saudi Arabia have resisted pressure from the hardliners to declare Sadat a pariah in the Arab world and cut him off politically and economically from his fellow states.

The summit will end Sunday, when a statement is to be released.

Garden Design: Key Is Simplicity

GARDENING
jack beastall

Another reader has suggested that a few Saturday columns should be devoted to garden designs suitable for a property the size of one or two standard city lots.

Several readers have made the same suggestion over the past year, indicating the need for help in tackling what is really a personal problem.

I have made suggestions to many local gardeners but have never designed their final layout or attempted to make usable plans for them.

The reason is simply stated: A garden has to portray the character and life style of its owner if it is to give satisfaction and pleasure in the years ahead. The design I would use on a given lot, and the plant material I would use, is not likely to suit another person.

The older gardening books religiously devoted a chapter to garden plans and plantings. Of the hundreds I have seen, not one suited my idea of a desirable layout.

I have met with gardeners who have paid money for plans, and more money for a professional to supply the plant material and attend to the planting, yet have confessed they never really liked the layout nor felt at home in the garden.

The truth of the matter is that the garden is not theirs; it is some other person's idea of what a garden should be.

Designing one's own garden is one of those difficulties we have to solve, and we look around for someone who will bolster our ideas and make us sure we are on the right track.

A given design cannot suit every gardener. Some of us are meticulous; everything has a place and is kept in that place. A formal garden theirs must be.

Then there is the property owner who cares little for plants or gardening but realizes something must be done to the area surrouding the residence. Any plan, any plants, and any man who can look after them and mow the lawn gives complete satisfaction.

Rather than make drawings and write columns on garden layouts, it would seem more reasonable, and more helpful, to outline things to avoid when making a layout of your own.

First, use a design to suit the lot; don't change the lot to suit the design. This means don't move soil from here to there, make excavations for sunken gardens or build unnecessary terraces.

Take full advantage of surrounding views. Exploit the neighbor's plantings as a background for your plants. Frame views you enjoy; blot out views that offend.

In a one-lot garden, avoid a maze of paths, but include one good solid path. This path, though part of the design, is primarily for moving the mower, taking prunings and plant wastes to the compost, and returning the compost to the beds each spring.

Side paths can be made from prefabricated concrete patio blocks used as stepping stones, set in place where needed after the plantings have been made.

Don't purchase a truckload of plants and attempt to plant them in a week or so. Buy a suitable plant for a given location, set it in place and study the effect. Move it if necessary. When its position is finalized that plant will suggest suitable companion plants.

The whole design should develop gradually, and is better if never truly completed. Once the layout is complete its interest decreases.

Whenever the picture fails to please, don't be afraid to move the plants while they are young. Each plant that is added changes the over-all affect of plants already in place.

Begin by planting a background. This may be a privacy planting, a wind, frost, or noise-and-fume barrier, and forms the backdrop against which future plants will be displayed.

If the background can be planted this fall, so much the better. By spring ideas for the inner plantings will abound.

Whenever possible use screens to divide the garden into several bays. Being able to view the entire area from one point reveals the small dimensions of the property.

When screened bays are used, there is excitement as to what will be found around the corner, and after seeing six or eight bays, each a feature in itself, the property seems to embrace an area of considerable size.

Select plants that suit the original size of the lot, that is, in true proportion. Forest trees, to 100 feet high with a 30-foot spread, belong on an acreage. While trying to make the lot seem like an acreage, big trees are not going to help.

Keep everything in proportion. Avoid unnecessary archways, pergolas, sculptures ornaments and plastic figures; these get in the way when working on the plantings, increasing the waste of time and energy.

Don't scatter your efforts, nor your plants. Make group plantings of one genus, such as a bay of rhododendrons and azaleas, another of species of Viburnums, dwarf conifers in another. The picture is far more effective than mixed plantings.

Correctly placed against a background of dark green, one plant can be an outstanding feature, but when scattered all through the plantings, or grouped together, they become a distraction.

Consider the ultimate size of each shrub and tree, and allow sufficient space a planting time. For example, a certain prostrate juniper with about three feet spread at planting time can have a spread of 16 feet in a few years. Allow space and fill in with cheap expendable shrubs, or cuttings from plants already in the garden, or divisions of perennials as tempory fillers while the permanent plants mature.

In all plantings leave enough room for pruning and regular maintenance work. Insufficient working room means wasted time and energy. Plan everything with the future work load in mind.

Using the normal planting sizes of trees and shrubs, the plants will take about 10 years to fill their allotted spaces and reveal their true beauty. What age will you be, and how much gardening work will you be able to do, 10 years hence? Plan the garden for the future and adapt it to present needs.

To fully enjoy a garden, one must be able to sit down and absorb its beauty. For this seats are needed, not heavy fixed benches, but light portable ones with a comfortable back, that can be put into winter sunshine or summer shade, or moved from bay to bay as each bay becomes a feature of beauty and color.

Any garden plan of mine would be rejected by most readers because there would be no provision for patches of grass. Good grass is costly to sow, expensive to maintain, and time-consuming to mow and edge trim. I prefer to spend my time and money on plants which increase in beauty and interest, and is value, as time passes.

As the property owner you are the artist. Your lot is the canvas on which you compose a picture, balancing masses and colors, contrasting forms and textures, in an effort to create a picture of lasting beauty.

UVic Pumps $72M Into Local Economy

University of Victoria this year pumped more than $72 million into the local economy and created 3,100 jobs, according to president Howard Petch.

He made the estimate in releasing a UVic economic impact study by Charles Gallagher of the university's office of institutional analysis.

Petch said a detailed analysis of 1976 data by Gallagher showed the university's impact was $60 million two years ago and, at an inflation rate of 10 per cent per year since that time, the current impact would be $72.4 million annually.

Local municipalities contribute $2.5 million to UVic's annual operating grant but there is a return of $72.4 million in local spending, for a net benefit to the community of $69.4 million.

While universities are not primarily concerned with profit and loss, it is important to note the economic benefits to the Victoria area, he said.

The Gallagher report shows that in 1976 the university employed 1,200 faculty and full-time staff with a gross income of $25 million and a disposable income of $19.1 million. In addition, the 5,280 full time and 2,100 part-time students spent an additional $14.1 million in the community.

Most of the employees and students live in the Saanich-Oak Bay area. Of the $19.1 million in net 1976 salaries, $7.4 million was earned by people living in Saanich, $7 million by people living in Oak Bay, $2.5 million by those residing in Victoria City and $1.2 million by those living in Esquimalt or the western areas.

Many of the 3,100 jobs created by UVic are in downtown firms acting as suppliers to the university, the study showed.

Strike Hobbles Lottery

Executive director Ray St. Denis said Friday a mass mailing of promotional literature and tickets to householders in Victoria and Vancouver areas has fallen far short of expected sales.

The mail was sent out Oct. 8 and only a small number of tickets had been returned before postal workers staged their week-long strike ending Oct. 26.

St. Denis said he believes the interruption in mail service may have caused a lot of people to decide not to enter the $100,000 lottery for fear their tickets would not get back in time for the big draw on Nov. 24.

"The returns we have received to date are not nearly up to what we had budgeted for," he said.

However, that cutoff date does not affect the mail solicitations.

St. Denis said householders who received tickets can still purchase them and mail the stubbs until Nov. 17.

Rescue Gear Still on Way

The commmanding officer of CFB Comox says progress is slow but Ottawa is not reneging on its promise to improve search and rescue facilities on the West Coast.

"I'm convinced my masters are aware of my problem and have done what they can to correct them," Col. B.T. Burgess said Friday.

His views were supported by Major Bill Leslie, search and rescue staff officer of Air Command in Winnipeg, who said a recommenation is now before the federal treasury board to provide funds for the necessary flying time to do an adequate search and rescue job.

Burgess said the three helicopters attached to 442 Search and Rescue Squadron are now equipped with "night-suns" to allow them to fly in the dark.

Plans are in process for supplying other equipment that will permit them to carry out rescue missions at night.

Included is navigational equipment, radar and suitable hoisting equipment.

A Buffalo prototype is being used to develop a kit that can be duplicated in other machines. Once this is done, he said, contracts will be let but the lead time could be anywhere from one to two years.

Shortage of parts has plagued the base but Burgess sid: "We're beginning to see some improvement on the spares situation."

He said he has been promised additional manpower to allow the rescue squadron to function on a 24-hour day basis with a 30-minute standby and he is sure this will be forthcoming once the aircraft are equipped.

Burgess said "an extraordinary push of activity in the first half of this year" has demanded hard work and lots of overtime by rescue squadron members but this should be tapering off.

"I have a good deal of extreme respect for our people. It should be settling down a bit now," he said.

Leslie said problems with the engines of Buffalo aircraft have been aggravated by the strike at the De Havilland plant. Solutions, he said, may cost anywhere from $5 million to $15 million to solve.

"This is not the type of decision to be made overnight."

While not yet confirmed, he said an additional helicopter could be based at Comox by late spring or summer of 1979.

The completion of the $45 million program for updating search and rescue facilities in Canada, announced by Defence Minister Barney Danson about 18 months ago, could be reached between 1982 and 1985, Leslie said.

Meanwhile, the number of incidents handled annually by the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt continues to rise by an average of 20 per cent.

Trio from Victoria Guilty In Duncan

Three Victoria men have been found guilty in county court in Duncan of robbery with violence in connection with the robbing and subsequent killing of a 76-year-old Cowichan Valley man in January, 1977.

James Thomas Riches, 23, Steven William Harris, 22, and Richard William Smith, 24, were remanded to Dec. 18 for sentencing. Smith was held in custody. The other two are on bail.

Macabre Mystery at the Mortuary

LANCASTER, England — Detectives are investigating the mystery of a 74-year-old Scotswoman who was stabbed seven times in the chest after her body was taken to the mortuary at Royal Lancaster Infirmary.

The macabre stabbing — similar to one described in Agatha Christie's novel, Murder on the Orient Express — took place several hours after Mrs. Margaret Leonard died of a heart attack.

Detectives believe the stabbing took place during the 50 minutes that elapsed from the time the body was placed in the mortuary until a policeman went there in connection with the post mortem. As the examination was about to begin seven stab wounds were discovered.

Detectives are also checking a theory that the stabbing was committed by the same person who broke into the mortuary some while ago and stole some surgical knives, which have never been recovered.

Mrs. Leonard was one of 54 passengers travelling on a motor coach from London to Aberdeen to visit friends before returning to her home in Dundee.

She suffered a heart attack near Forton, Lancashire, and was taken off the coach by ambulance men. She was given first-aid en route to Lancaster Infirmary but was dead on arrival there.

Detectives interviewed every person who had any contact with Mrs. Leonard from the start of the coach journey from London.

"This is an extremely difficult case," said a spokesman for the Lancashire C.I.D. "There is no evidence that anyone entered the mortuary while the body was there."

The Hatred Of Karpov

MOSCOW — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov says he feels hatred for Victor Korchnoi — the man he defeated in a three-month title match in the Philippines.

Karpov also said he would not play U.S. grandmaster Bobby Fischer outside the framework of the International Chess Federation.

Discussing his victory over Korchnoi in the series that ended Oct. 18, Karpov said: "The feeling I felt toward my opponent was one of hatred because he betrayed our country where he learned to play chess. He slandered our country."

Karpov has had a long-standing feud with the 47-year-old Korchnoi. He defeated Korchnoi in 1974 in a match that eventually gave him the world title by default when Fischer refused to play.

Korchnoi defected from the Soviet Union two years ago and has been living in the Netherlands and Switzerland. He cited official favoritism for Karpov as one of the reasons he left the Soviet Union.

Korchnoi Suing

AMSTERDAM — Viktor Korchnoi has begun legal action in the Netherlands to bring Anatoly Karpov to court over their championship match last month, his lawyer said Friday. Korchnoi, who lost the match against Karpov by six games to five, will ask an Amsterdam court to rule that the decisive game of the match was invalid, lawyer Jan Voute said.

Cross Won't Say Anything

MONTREAL — James Cross says he knows nothing about reports concerning a mysterious sixth man involved in his kidnapping here in October, 1970.

Cross said he has not been informed of an English-speaking sixth member of the Front de Liberation du Quebec cell that held him hostage as a political prisoner for 61 days.

The former British trade commissioner to Montreal answered other questions in a telephone interview from London with a terse "no comment." He is now an official of the British energy department.

Asked if one of his captors was an anglophone, Cross said: "I have no comment to make and I will make no other."

The interviewer then mentioned the possibility that a sixth person participated in the kidnapping.

"How do you think I would know that," Cross said.

NEWTON CONVICTED

OAKLAND, Calif. — Former Black Panther party-leader Huey Newton was sentenced Friday to two years in prison for his conviction on a weapons possession charge but will remain free on $50,000 bail.

Defence lawyer Michael Kennedy said later: "The sentence is what we expected. But at least we got Huey free."

Ehrlichman Takes A Young Bride

Christy

NEW YORK — John Ehrlichman Friday married a "bubbly," 30-year-old divorcee in a private ceremony on Staten Island, but skipped a reception at a Manhattan ice cream parlor because of hordes of reporters and photographers.

Ehrlichman, 53, and Christy Peacock McLaurine were wed in a "very, very simple" 10-minute ceremony. The only persons present were the bride's best friend, Mary Lynn Gould, and her husband, Donald.

The Goulds had planned a wedding reception for 25 close friends at their ice cream store in Manhattan, but Ehrlichman phoned 15 minutes beforehand to cancel out.

"John called and said he just couldn't put his new wife through this," Gould said, pointing to the reporters who jammed the store's single aisle. "He would be here if he could. He loves ice cream."

Whooping Cough Epidemic In Britain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a whooping cough epidemic in England and Wales and a British specialist says it follows a drop in public acceptance of vaccinations for the disease because of concern over possible side effects.

Sir Charles Stuart-Harris of the University of Sheffield Medical School said 50,000 cases of the childhood disease have been officially reported since last November. There have been 12 deaths.

Stuart-Harris said immunization rates in Britain dropped from 75 per cent in 1974 for children under 5 to only 40 per cent in 1976 "largely because of publicity concerning alleged risks."

There were heavily publicized reports of brain damage occurring in a few children who received the shots, but Stuart-Harris' new studies show no permanent brain damage in 150,000 children immunized against whooping cough.

Britain uses a combination vaccine similar to that widely used in the United States to protect against diphtheria and tetanus as well as whooping cough. Most American youngsters under the age of 5 receive the vaccine.

The U.S. Public Health Service advises parents whose children are to receive the vaccine that most children will have a slight fever and be irritable a day or two after receiving the shot.

About one in 7,000 will have a more serious side effect such as convulsions and about one in every 100,000 receiving the vaccine will have inflammation of the brain and possible brain damage.

U.S. advisory committees have concluded the protection offered by vaccine against whooping cough far outweighs the risks of side effects.

U.S. JEEPS RECALLED

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. on Friday recalled 363 CJ-5 and CJ-7 Jeep models because a clamp holding the steering gear box to the tie rod may be loose.

The company said it has no reports of accidents or injuries resulting from loose clamps.

All the Jeeps affected were from very early in model run and some may still be on dealer lots, AMC said.

Kremlin Wants Spies Back

Washington Post

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union Friday night demanded the immediate repatriation of two convicted Soviet spies from the United States, denounced their 50-year prison sentences as "monstrous," and warned that the case could have a chilling effect on Soviet-American relations.

It was the first public comment by the Soviets since the sentences against Valdik Enger, 39, and Rudolf Chernyayev, 43, were handed down Monday.

Soviet television commentator Dmitri Morozov declared on the prestigious national news show, Vremya (Time): "Any man of common sense cannot but draw the conclusion that the court persecutions of Enger and Chernyayev must be immediately stopped and they should be allowed to return to the motherland without any obstacles."

He warned that "the U.S. authorities must remember that, while arranging such provocations, they take on themselves the full responsibility for their consequences."

Morozov added: "It is not accidental that the trial of our Soviet diplomats was timed to coincide with the opening of the General Assembly and announcement of their sentence coincided when some shift has occurred of such an importance for the cause of peace as concluding an agreement on the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty."

The trial was the work of "those opposed to improvements in Soviet-American relations,." he said.

Canada Convention Pitch

WASHINGTON (CP) — About 40 Canadian tourism and convention specialists wound up a week-long blitz of Washington-based associations Friday with promises of increased convention business for Canada, the chairman of the group said.

Ted Semple, director of marketing development for Travel Alberta, said the Canadian team had made considerable headway in reversing the drop in the number of U.S. groups holding conventions in Canada, a decline caused by a change in U.S. tax laws.

Burned Lunch Was Lethal

Police Chief Donald Ebert said Manuel Prieto told police he grabbed a kitchen knife and stabbed his wife, Antonia, after an argument over the burned lunch.

"It apparently was one of those spontaneous reactions, that at their age, mushroomed," said Ebert.

FIRA Blocks Data Firm

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The federal goverment has blocked plans of Data Communications to become the first inter-provincial company to set up headquarters in Victoria in more than a decade.

It was learned today the federal Foreign Investment Review Board has refused to give the company permission to operate in Victoria because it is American-owned and controlled.

The ruling has been appealed and the provincial ministry of economic development has urged Ottawa to let Data Communications operate in Canada because it would be a significant addition to the Victoria economy.

A verdict on the appeal is expected by month's end.

Caught in the middle is the Victoria Real Estate Board which is the first customer for the computer firm.

The company has leased premises at 2820 Nanaimo, two blocks from the Victoria Real Estate Board office, where it plans to print the catalogues if Ottawa has a change of heart.

First catalogues were to come off the press in Victoria on Friday but instead will be printed at the company's international headquarters in Santa Barbara.

"We can't print our catalogues in California indefinitely," a spokesman for the Victoria Real Estate Board said today.

"We hope Data Communications will be able to operate here but if not we will have to consider printing the catalogues ourselves, just as we have been doing."

Also caught in the controversy are eight members of the real estate board's publications staff who were laid off at the end of October to go to work for Data Communications.

Because of the federal ruling, Data Communications said it could not hire the eight people for fear of running afoul of Canadian laws. The eight will remain unemployed until the issue is resolved.

The federal government is understood to have asked McGraw-Hill that there be both Canadian financing and management in Data Communications if it is to operate in Canada. It also objects to storing of Canadian data in an American computer in California.

The company is prepared to consider all requests. All company employees in Canada would be Canadians, the firm said, and this includes all managerial personnel.

Filmless Camera Coming

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — A new electronic hand-held camera that might revolutionize photography because it does not require film or photo flash and has no moving parts is under development by the RCA Corp.

RCA says the camera, which is still in the design stage, is rugged, light-weight and so sensitive that it can take excellent quality photos — color or black-and-white — without a flash in any light, even on a dark, moonless night.

The retail price of the camera and equipment will be competitive with conventional photo gear, said a company engineer who promised picture quality will be excellent.

He said, however, that a working prototype has not been put together. Designs of various components still are being built and reduced to miniature circuitry.

You can view your pictures immediately on a television-like screen on the camera and erase the ones you do not want, the company said. Pictures you want to keep are retained on a computer-like memory chip in the camera.

Krall, product line director for closed-circuit video equipment for RCA, heads several teams of electronics scientists who are developing a new technology for still photography in a race with other companies in the United States and abroad.

Students Striking For 4-Day Week

COQUITLAM (CP) — About 500 students walked out of classes at Winslow junior secondary school Friday, saying they would not return until a four-day school week was implemented.

"The students were discussing the various days-of-work structures among labor unions and then they started talking about shorter weeks in the schools—but all the time it was just a theoretical discussion."

The communications class distributed opinion surveys to the other students and many of them took the idea seriously, he said.

One Grade 10 student, who said he was one of the strike's leaders, said he did not know how long the strike would last.

House, who has scheduled a meeting with the students, said the idea is impractical because society is not ready for it.

"Schools don't lead, they follow. There's just no way we could implement the four-day week."

Boy Held In Rush Bombing

A bomb blast during a rock show at Memorial Arena has ended in a bust for 16-year-old Saanich boy who is expected to appear in family court next week.

Police said an explosive device was set off in a water tank above a urinal in the south end mezzanine men's washroom, causing about $500 damage.

The boy was grabbed and held for police.

The explosion occurred Thursday night during a concert featuring Rush and attended by nearly 4,000.

It was the second bomb incident in Greater Victoria this week involving juveniles.

On Thursday a 16-year-old Central Saanich boy was charged with possession of explosive materials and theft after Saanich police raided a residence and discovered a pipe-bomb factory.

It is not known if the two incidents are related.

Ottawa Stall: B.C. Out $25M . . .For Opener

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said today desperation efforts by Ottawa to reduce its deficit will cost B.C. as much as $25 million next year in lost water services grants alone.

Wolfe has just returned from the first ministers conference in Ottawa where the federal government Friday announced it will delay for at least one year provincial grants totalling $250 million.

The grants are for joint federal-provincial programs for welfare and local services.

"This is really going to hurt British Columbia because we had signed agreements with the federal government and were ready to proceed," Wolfe said.

He said the grants have been delayed, not eliminated, and hopefully Ottawa will be able to make good on its commitment in 1980.

What angers the provincial finance ministers, he said, is the lack of advance warning about the cutback and then the minimal consultation that followed.

He said Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau told Ottawa the provinces were being offered a choice of which way they wanted to be eaten — boiled or fried.

Wolfe said: "That pretty well sums up the situation."

He said the provinces are being forced to bail out the federal government, which has genuine and severe financial problems, but problems of its own making.

"Ottawa did not heed our warnings about over-spending and now they are being forced to take remedial actions."

Many of these remedial actions are at the expense of the provinces, he said.

Wolfe said B.C. warned Ottawa that its 1977-78 estimates showed a 12 per cent increase in spending at a time when provincial governments were exercising restraint.

"They didn't listen to our warning and now we are all paying."

Wolfe said the delays will cost B.C. between $15 million and $25 million in community services grants plus a lesser amount for welfare programs.

He said the B.C. government will do what it can to help Ottawa with its prob-

MOSCOW (WP) — The Soviet Union Friday night demanded the immediate repatriation of two convicted Soviet spies from the United States, denounced their 50-year prison sentences as "monstrous," and warned that the case could have a chilling effect on Soviet-American relations. See story on page 63.

Winter's First Storm Kills Two, Hurts Many

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The first major storm of the winter struck southern Vancouver Island with a vengeance Friday dumping up to 38 mm. of rain and some snow.

The storm contributed to numerous traffic accidents, including a four-car pileup on the Malahat that took the life of a 19-year-old New Westminster youth.

The weather was also believed partly to blame for another traffic fatality in the Duncan area early this morning when a 19-year-old Saskatchewan man was killed after his car skidded into a power pole at Maple Bay and Drummond Roads. An unidentified female passenger was not hurt. No names have been released.

Colwood RCMP identified the victim of the Malahat crash as Ronald Andrew Campbell.

A spokesman said Campbell was a passenger in a car that went out of control on a curve on Tunnel Hill about half a mile north of the Goldstream Park picnic area.

The car, driven by Daniel Jacques, 19, of 1010 Empress, sideswiped one oncoming car and slid broadside into another, police said.

The accident occurred shortly after 3:30 p.m. in pelting rain and fog.

Campbell was killed instantly but Jacques escaped with minor injuries.

Two other persons were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries. Their names have not been released.

The mishap was one of six accidents attended by Colwood police overnight as heavy rain mixed with snow on the higher elevations created nightmarish driving conditions.

Sidney reported three traffic accidents involving six vehicles and both Saanich and Victoria catalogued more than a dozen, half of which involved injuries.

Most of the injuries were fairly minor except one involving a 45-year-old pedestrian who was sent to Royal Jubilee with a concussion and multiple cuts after being hit by a car in the 1900-block McKenzie at 6 p.m.

Saanich police said Michael Parris of 1869 Elmhurst was walking across the road shielding himself from the downpour and didn't see the car approaching driven by

All Plugs Pulled For Clean-Up

Times News Services

Premier Bill Bennett said Friday the provincial government will spare no expense in cleaning up the mess left in the wake of severe flooding in several northwestern British Columbia communities.

"The first priority at this time is to do the clean-up, restore the transportation and all the utilites, make sure there is no further loss of property and to try and get on with the rebuilding," Bennett said.

The government does not yet have an estimate of the costs involved.

"It's extensive," Bennett said. "We're talking in figures of millions of dollars which we will have to spend to restore the utilities and transportation services, and to deal in fighting the problem.

"Nothing has been delayed or held back."

Highways Minister Alex Fraser Fraser, who was earlier stranded in the area because of the flooding, will be responsible for the clean-up program.

The premier told a news conference the government would help persons living in the Terrace-Kitimat area, where the flooding is concentrated, saying it would "be responsive to the needs of communities and individuals."

He said the government has opened a headquarters in Terrace to co-ordinate its program. MLA Cyril Shelford (SC-Skeena) will work out of the office, which will co-ordinate provincial and federal

The Memoirs of Margaret T. Worth $500,000 So Far

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Margaret Trudeau's book about her life as wife of the Canadian prime minister appears destined for the international best-seller lists.

Serialization rights to the book, A Personal Memoir, have already been sold to European publishers and competition among North American companies for the right to publish excerpts is reported to be "vigorous."

At an auction two weeks ago in West Germany, the London Daily Express paid a reported $80,000 for British serialization rights to the as-yet-uncompleted book. Sources said that the German publication, Der Stern, paid about $100,000 for similar publication rights for western Europe.

In New York, a representative of the New York Times syndicate confirmed Friday that his organization has submitted a bid for U.S. serialization rights, but he refused to disclose any figures.

Other U.S. and Canadian sources said, however, that serialization rights and other pre-publication sales could earn Mrs. Trudeau as much as $500,000.

Spokesmen for Paddington Press, the New York city company that is publishing the book and handling arrangements for secondary publication rights, refused to comment on either the content or the remuneration that Mrs. Trudeau stands to receive.

The spokesman for the New York Times Company said, however, that the book was "in excellent taste and speaks highly of the prime minister."

The Times representative said his company would not have been interested in the book "if it was not in good taste or could have in any way affected the outcome of the (next Canadian) election."

Rumors that Mrs. Trudeau's book would include sections that could prove politically embarrassing to her husband were dismissed by all who have read excerpts of the uncompleted manuscript.

"It is exceedingly well written," said one publisher's representative who asked not to be identified, "and it speaks most highly of Mr. Trudeau."

Random House publishers, of Toronto, has purchased the Canadian hardback publishing rights for the book, but syndication rights for Canada have not yet been sold.

New York sources said discussions are now under way with several Canadian publishers and that Canadian serialization rights probably will be sold within the next two to three weeks.

One New York publisher said he thought the book would have strong appeal to "young people."

Unhappiness Tied to Chemical Imbalance

TORONTO (CP) — A Swedish doctor says the reason man is the only species on earth to build spaceships to the moon or to use stimulants may be because he lacks enough chemicals in his brain to keep him happy.

Dr. Lars Terenius of Uppsala University, who discovered the presence of morphine-like drugs in the brain, suggests only half-jokingly that man's unique drive for achievement — and his desire to get drunk — may reflect his lack of enough self-generated euphoria.

Since his discovery of endorphins in the human brain, it has been found that the opiate-like chemicals are made elsewhere in the body, in the pituitary and adrenal glands, Dr. Terenius said in an interview.

It now appears that endorphins may be involved in other functions besides the perception of pain.

"I tend to think of these substances as modulatory — involved in the fine-tuning of sensory adaptation," he said.

"Normally, I am not aware of my watch, but if I switch it to the right wrist, it feels uncomfortable. I'm aware of it for two or three days until I adapt to the change."

Endorphins also may be involved in the fine-tuning of movement, permitting mammals to move smoothly, unlike robots, and in the fine tuning of hormones released by the pituitary gland.

Dr. Terenius said previous research on the action of opiates in the body has provided tools for investigation of endorphins.

One of these is naloxone, a specific opiate which can turn off the effects of a drug such as morphine, he said.

Malfunctioning of the endorphin system is believed to play a role in some kinds of pain.

Dr. Terenius said pain-prone patients, persons who suffer from migraine headaches and those with an unusually low threshold of pain, may have something wrong with the function of their endorphin system.

The malfunctioning may be reversed in the case of persons with an unusually high threshold of pain, he said.

The same malfunction may be involved in schizophrenia.

He said beta-endorphin is a form of an amino-acid compound, a particular fragment of which has been duplicated synthetically in the laboratory. Studies in the Netherlands seem to show that the fragments have a beneficial effect on schizophrenic patients.

Dr. Terenius said his Swedish research team plans similar studies and that, if further research confirms the Dutch work, it will provide further evidence that schizophrenia is a metabolic disease — an abnormal processing of chemicals in the body.

Dr. Terenius was one of nine scientists to receive the $10,000 Gairdner Foundation awards for outstanding contribution to medical science.

The other winners this year are: Dr. Sydney Brenner, Cambridge University ; Dr. Donald S. Frederickson, United States National Institute of Health, and Dr. Edwin G. Krebs, University of Washington.

'TOO MANY DOWNERS'

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Canadians are swallowing too many tranquillizers, a seminar on depression was told this week.

Dr. Jack Diamond of the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital said tranquillizers, most commonly Valium, are grossly misused.

He said they produce apathy in most people, but in some cases the inhibition-lowering effects of Valium cause hypersensitivity and violence.

Dr. Diamond said Valium should not be used for more than two weeks and that patients should realize that medication is not the only way to alleviate depression.

Psychiatrist Dr. Peter Payne said, however, that patients and their families should not give up on tranquillizers because they sometimes take two or three weeks to work effectively.

Suicide Aiding Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Thomas Wai Hui, 20, was charged today with aiding a suicide in the death of his father, a Chinese businessman whose body was found Tuesday with a cyanide-soaked rag in his mouth, Metropolitan Toronto police said.

Sgt. Harry Bryan said police were satisfied the man committed suicide so his family could collect on a life insurance policy.

The son is in Canada on a student visa and was studying for a science degree at the University of Toronto, S.Sgt. Bryan said.

The body of Hui Ka-kwan, 53, was found in a parking lot. Tests showed he died of the combined effects of choking and cyanide poisoning, police said today.

Police said the man had been living in Toronto hotels recently with his wife and four children. He did not keep an appointment Tuesday with Canadian immigration officials to extend visas for himself and his family.

Weddings

Carlson — Konrath

On the evening of Oct. 7, 1978, a double ring candlelight ceremony in St. Joseph's Catholic Church united Jeannie Konrath and Wayne Carlson. Father Joe Ponic entered the church after Debbie Konrath and Angela Janusonis, sister and cousin of the bride, lit the candles on the altar. Louise Wells, bridesmaid, then came down the aisle dressed in a dusty rose polyester gown trimmed with white lace, followed by the matron of honor, Mrs. Fern Walker, in an identical gown of dusty blue. Both girls carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and wore a small off-white flower in their hair. Jeannie entered the church on the arms of her parents, Frank and Mary-Lou Konrath, to the music of the Hawaiian Wedding Song, played by Robert Neufeld. The bride's gown was floor length crimped cotton, accented by thin strips of white satin ribbon (Yofi's Creation). She wore a small Juliet cap with waist length veil and carried a bouquet of pink roses and white carnations. The bride's mother wore a long beige gown accented by pink roses and white mums, while the groom's mother, Mrs. Dorothy Carlson, wore a long rust and white patterned gown and a white orchid. The groom wore a champagne-white tuxedo, and his best man Dave Calder and usher Rex Coburn, wore dark brown tuxedos. Susan Carlson, sister of the bride, read from the Bible, and a poem from the Prophet.

Reception followed at the Olde England Inn. Gary Carlson, brother of the groom and master of ceremonies, introduced the immediate family to guests. Special guest, Father Bernie Hanley, was present at the ceremony and reception. Art Bishop, the bride's grandfather; proposed the toast. Mr. Paul Zasitko, close friend of the Konraths, made and decorated the beautiful, three tiered, pink and white cake. Later in the evening, the bride changed into a white satin jumpsuit accented with a yellow rose. This was chosen as her going away outfit. The couple will return to Vancouver where they will live, after a short honeymoon. Many thanks to Father Joe Ponic, Mavis Mayne, Gladys Langkamer, Paul Zasitko and the staff at the Olde England Inn.

Col. and Mrs. Arthur H. Clark (ret'd) of Santa Barbara, California. Rev. E. Laura Butler officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose an off shoulder daisy lace and white chiffon dress with a train. The maid of honour, Miss Karen Larson, sister of the bride, and bridesmaid Miss Deborah Camp, wore matching long green jersey gowns. They carried bouquets of yellow and white daisy chrysanthemums. The groom wore a grey and black tuxedo, as did the best man, Mr. Timothy Ewert of Palm Springs, and the usher Mr. David Larson, brother of the bride.

A dinner reception and dance was held at the Uplands Golf Club following the ceremony. Mr. James Blake, uncle of the bride and master of ceremonies, proposed the toast to the bride.
